NOTE.—Nine pages of fascimile and lithographs of the original papers are attached to the end of the volume.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

On the transfer of the administration of the Panjāb in 1849, the Khālṣa Darbār records, consisting of official papers dealing with the ministerial details of the several departments of the Government of Mahārāja Ranjit Singh and his successors, came into the hands of the British Government and were safely deposited in the archives of the Civil Secretariat. Here they remained untouched for well nigh seventy years till Sir Michael O'Dwyer directed this rich mine of historical material to be explored. The following pages are the result of the work of arrangement and classification which was undertaken under the orders of Government and has been carried on without interruption during the past four years. It is expected that two other similar volumes will be published later on.

Introductory.
Official records in the Sikh time.
The Sikhs followed the Mughal system of keeping the official records in loose sheets instead of in bound books. "This custom," says Blochmann, "is still in use in Persia and suits the Eastern countries, the hot and damp climate of which soon destroys the binding of books." Papers relating to several departments for one official year were arranged in a bumble, the two ends of which were protected by beautifully painted wooden case boards of Kashmir make and the whole tied tightly with cotton strings. Some of the bundles are as much as three feet in length, and contain as many as 3,000 sheets. The paper used is of the kind commonly known as Kashmīrī or Siālkoti paper and, as a rule, the sheets measure 5" x 7½". The language is Persian and the writing a running shikasta by no means easy to decipher without considerable practice. Though some of the papers are as much as a century old, they are for the most part in a good state of preservation.

The volume of the record.
The entire record consists of 129 bundles, covering a period of thirty-eight years of Sikh rule, viz., from Sambat 1868 to Chet 1906 (1811—March 1849 A.D.). Besides these bundles there are 15 MSS. volumes bound in leather, containing duplicate copies of orders issued to various Government officials. These books exhibit a deplorable state of decay and go a long way in corroborating the remarks of Blochmann quoted above. The paper is eaten by worms from one end to the other.* There is, also, a voluminous correspondence between Ranjit Singh and the Ludhiāna and Ambala

* In order to save them from further decay, these books have been preserved in formatin.

Agencies of the British Government. They are all in Persian, written in a running shikasta hand.

When I undertook the preparation of a catalogue of these papers I found them lying in confused heaps on the shelves of the vernacular office in the Secretariat rooms. There was nothing to indicate either the subject or the chronological order of these bundles; even the papers comprised in each bundle were utterly disarranged, and the want of continuous and consecutive paging of the papers rendered the task of arrangement more difficult. My first attempt was, therefore, to subject the entire contents of these shelves to a preliminary examination and to draw up for my own use a rough list of the whole collection. I had then to sort these bundles by subjects in a chronological and consecutive order and accordingly prepared another list showing these particulars. Only when these preliminaries were over, could I commence and take in hand the work of actual arrangement and classification and I have now after a thorough examination of these bundles grouped them in the following four main heads in reference to the subject matter :—

- (1) daftar fauj—relating to the army.
- (2) „ māl—relating to the general revenues.
- (3) „ toshakhāna—relating to royal wardrobe and the King's privy purse.
- (4) „ jāgīrāt—relating to the jāgīr accounts.

It is proposed to issue the catalogue in three volumes—Volume I, comprising bundles relating to the army; Volume II, comprising bundles relating to the general revenues; and volume III, comprising bundles relating to the toshakhāna and jāgīr accounts.

The volume now issued contains a summary catalogue of 66 bundles pertaining to daftar fauj or the Military Department. These papers fall in three sections, viz. —

- (1) barāwurd taqsim talab or the pay rolls. A specimen has been reproduced as an appendix.
- (2) jam' kharch or the papers relating to the credit and debit accounts of the Army Department.
- (3) chihra or the descriptive-rolls.

Each of the above sections is sub-divided into two parts—one dealing with fauj āin or the regular army organized on the European model and the other with fauj sowāri, or the irregular cavalry. The pay rolls of the regular army date from Sambat 1876 (1819 A. D.), those of the irregular cavalry from Sambat 1901 (1844 A. D.) and the jam' kharch accounts of the two branches also run from the corresponding dates.

It is necessary to state that the papers relating to the two branches of the army prior to the dates above noted will be dealt with in Volume II of the present series. This plan has been adopted with a view to maintaining the original arrangement of the records. Before the separate daftars for the two branches were organized in Sambat years 1876 (1819 A.D.) and 1901 (1844 A.D.) respectively, all the military records were kept in the same bundles along with those relating to the general revenues, where they have accordingly been allowed to remain.

The present volume has been divided into four parts, viz., Part I relating to the pay rolls of the Regular army; Part II relating to the pay rolls of the Irregular Cavalry; Part III relating to the jam' kharch accounts, and Part IV relating to the Descriptive Rolls.

Each part contains a summary catalogue of the various bundles grouped under that particular head.

The papers contained in each bundle have been arranged and catalogued in a serial order, the date of the rolls for each separate unit as well as the total number of folios comprised within each set being also stated. With a view to indicating clearly the growth of the army, the total strength* together with the monthly expenditure on pay of each of the three arms—infantry, cavalry and artillery—have been given at five year intervals; although further details of pay and strength of individual units are shown only at ten year intervals. Here and there explanatory notes have also been added.

Again each of the four parts into which the volume is divided has been prefaced with a concise narrative of the main facts which an examination of the papers reveals. In this manner it has been found possible, within the compass of not more than 25 pages, to present a more or less clear picture of the organization of the Khālṣa army, its growth and the administration of its chief branches as well as of the system of maintaining military records of the different kinds. Specimens of certain original documents, one of which has been reproduced as an appendix and the other in the body of the book on page 207, will indicate the kind and character of the entries on the basis of which the prefatory notes have been compiled.

* In connection with the working out of the figures given at pages 5, 8, 14, 22, 31, 44, 70, 86, it seems necessary to point out that wherever the pay rolls of certain units (especially of cavalry) could not be traced among the papers relating to a particular period, the strength of the units in question were taken from the rolls of the preceding year.

I am under particular obligation to the Hon'ble Mr. J. P. Thompson, M A., C.S.I., I.C.S., under whose constant invaluable advice and guidance this catalogue has been compiled. I feel that I cannot adequately give expression to my sense of obligation and the feelings of utmost gratitude I owe him, both for the time he could spare from his heavy official duties for the uninteresting task of looking into the proof sheets and for the several valuable suggestions he gave regarding the arrangement of the volume while in press.

My best thanks are due to Mr. H. L. O. Garrett, Professor of the Government College, who very kindly evinced the closest interest in the progress of the catalogue and was also good enough to look into the final proofs.

I cannot leave this opportunity without thanking Mr. T. Tyson, Superintendent, Government Printing, Panjab, for the special pains he so kindly took in getting the work expedited.

LAHORE :

PART I.

REGULAR ARMY.

THE fanj-āin or regular army of Ranjīt Singh consisted, principally, of infantry and artillery, trained in European methods of drill. The entire cavalry, excepting a few regiments of dragoons and lancers trained by General Allard, was essentially composed of the ghorcharāhs or irregular horse.

Introductory.

The use of artillery and the employment of large masses of disciplined infantry were recent innovations in the Indian system of warfare. The Mughals, the Marhattas and the Sikhs were all accustomed to fight on horseback only, they despised foot soldiers, and in artillery they never became proficient. It was not till the middle of the 18th century, when the French and the English had demonstrated the vast superiority of disciplined infantry, that the Indian potentates understood the value of this arm and began to raise battalions with the help of European adventurers who had found their way into India through the French and English East India Companies. Haidar 'Ali, Mādhoji Sindhia and Jaswant Rāo Holkar first took the initiative, and partially remodelled their armies. In the Panjab, however, the old system survived. The country was more or less under the sway of the confederate Khālsa whose every member was supposed to be a horseman. The military force of the various chiefs of this confederacy was composed essentially of cavalry, for though some artillery was also maintained, it was far from properly managed. The infantry, which was held in low estimation, usually garrisoned the forts, besides being employed on the meaner duties of the service. It was only in the beginning of the nineteenth century, when Ranjīt Singh had raised a few battalions of disciplined infantry, that the Sikhs learned the value and proper use of this arm. Of all the Sikh misdārs, Ranjīt Singh was the only one who realised that, with the advent of the European nations in India, existing tactics had become ineffective, and that cavalry could not long hold out against the steady fire of the gunner and the musketeer. He came to believe that no Indian State, unless it adopted their methods, could, in any case, hold out against the European nations. He, therefore, took in hand the remodelling of his forces and applied himself to the task with far greater earnestness than the rulers of Mysore or the Marhatta chiefs had done before him; and at last succeeded, though not without some difficulty, in making his people give up their customary order of battle. By degrees the infantry service came to be preferred in the History.

Panjab, and Ranjit Singh lived to see it regarded as the proper warlike array of his people.

In the absence of any direct evidence from the records of his Government,¹ it is difficult to ascertain the exact date when Ranjit Singh raised his first battalion of regular infantry. On the evidence, however, of the descriptive-rolls (dealt with in Part IV of this volume) one can say with some confidence that in Sambat 1864 (1807 A.D.) the Mahārāja had at least three such battalions in his service, though a year later Mr. (afterwards Sir) C. Metcalfe, who came to his Court as envoy of the English, "saw five of them in the service of the Rājā."

Sayyid Muhammad Latif in his History of the Panjab states that the new battalions, known as paltān Najīb, together with topkhāna khāṣṣ (King's Own battery), formed part of the force sent against Ahmad Khān of Jhang in 1803. But following Sohan Lal—the court historian of the Mahārāja—one is led to think that it was Jaswant Rāo Holkar,² who first suggested the maintenance of regular infantry when he met Ranjit Singh in 1805 at Amritsar.

From the study of the pay rolls of the earlier years it appears that at first the infantry service was not very popular. In almost all the battalions raised between Sambat 1864 and 1870 (1807-1813 A.D.) the Panjabi element was very meagre, and the bulk of the regulars consisted of Hindustānis, Gurkhas and Afghāns, who enlisted in considerable numbers, attracted chiefly by the good pay and the prospect of adventure. The ghorcharāhs still looked with contempt upon the foot soldier and the proud old chiefs resented the innovation. But Ranjit Singh, who had been much impressed with the superiority of European drill, was not the man to be turned from his purpose. Perseverance, combined with his usual tact, soon enabled him to conquer the prejudices of his people. He began to show special favour to the newly-created branch of the army in every possible way. He used to attend its parades in person and, as marks of his pleasure, he would not infrequently distribute gifts of money and clothes to the men with his own hands. For his own co-religionists, who joined these ranks, the conditions of service in the beginning were made specially attractive. Instead of being paid at a fixed monthly rate like other non-Panjābi sepoys (for the Sikhs in the beginning abhorred the very idea of cash payment), they were given assignments of land-revenue or land or were paid lump sums twice a year at harvest time.¹ The service was thus gradually made popular in the province, so that after Sambat 1875 (1818 A.D.) we find the Panjābi element predominant in all the branches of the regular army. The ranks of this army were filled with Sikhs, Hindūs, Muhammadans and Rājput̃s. It will also be noticed from the succeeding pages that, as Ranjit Singh's plans developed, he exhibited the same cosmopolitanism in the officering of this army. Europeans or Indians, Hindūs or Muslims, Sikhs or Rājput̃s, all were employed, provided they knew their trade.

¹ These records in the first place contain no direct reference to this effect, and, secondly, they commence only from Chet 1868 (April 1811 A.D.), i.e., long after the Mahārāja had introduced European drill into his armies.

The original reads thus :—

بعد از آن هر کس عسکره سرکار والا از دشمن دربار صاحب سعادت جاهدانی حاصل ساخت و اکثره تا در پاس در خلوت بقیه انبیا بعضی مقدمات مشغول بودند و اکثره قواعد پلانی و سواران خود مشاهده کنانیدند و بنا بر نگه داشتن پلانی افراد ملازمی و فیهالید دفتر دوله صفحه ۵۸-۵۹-

In the beginning, the organisation of the regular army was very simple. Each battalion of infantry with two horse guns attached to it was treated as a complete unit, and was controlled and looked after by its own commanding officer, the kumedān or Commandant as he was called. But gradually, as the Mahārāja employed more efficient officers like Ventura, Allard, Court, Avitabile and others, the organisation underwent a considerable change. We accordingly find that after Sambat 1890 (1833 A.D.), a battalion, instead of being a complete unit, formed only a part of the unit, the army being then organised into brigades, each of which contained a fixed proportion of the three arms, infantry, artillery and cavalry, with the necessary services for the supply of ammunition and forage. As a rule, the brigade was composed of 4 battalions of infantry, one battery of 8 to 10 horse guns, and a small force varying from a *risālah*² to a regiment of cavalry with a company of beldārs (Sappers and Miners).

In the organization of infantry, a battalion was the administrative and manœuvring unit. It was about 900 strong and was commanded by an officer of the rank of a Commandant (kumedān) who had an Adjutant and a Major to assist him. To each battalion was attached a munshi or clerk, a mutasaddi, or accountant who kept the regimental accounts, and a granthi or reader of the Sikh scriptures. In a battalion there were 8 companies of nominal strength of about 100 each. These were commanded by subadārs and each subadār was assisted by two jam'dārs. A company was divided into 4 sections of about ¹It may however be pointed out that these concessions were gradually withdrawn as the service became more popular, and towards the close of the Mahārāja's reign the system of payment by jāgris or the lump sum, 'o men in the regular army almost disappeared.

A risālah was generally 180—200 strong and a regiment ordinarily contained from 600 to 650 men.

25 men each, each commanded by a hawāldār who had one nāik to assist him. The *phuriya (probably French fourrier) and the sergeant who were not assigned to any section perhaps assisted the company commander in his administrative duties.

The artillery, or more exactly topkhāna (which is the generic term used for artillery in these papers) was sub-divided into (i) topkhāna jinsi comprising mixed batteries of aspi (horse) and gāwi (bullock) guns and *hobath*¹ (howitzers), (ii) topkhāna aspi or purely horse batteries, and (iii) zambarakkhāna or swivel batteries.

The number of guns in a mixed battery varied from 10 to 25 and sometimes even more; in a horse battery it ranged from 6 to 10 and in a swivel battery the number was about 60.

The organisation and interior economy of a battery very much resembled that of an infantry battalion. The average strength of a 10-gun battery was 250 men including non-combatants² under a Commandant assisted by an Adjutant and a Major. Each battery was divided into sections, each section comprising one gun having on an average 11 gunners attached to it. A section was under the control of a jam'dār who had a hawāldār and a nāik as his assistants.

The regular army of the Mahārāja was, as a rule, paid in cash; but instances of payment by an assignment of revenue-free lands in lieu of monthly salaries to some of the higher officers are not wanting. However, there was neither a fixed scale according to which men in various grades of service were paid, nor any hard and fast regulations which governed their promotion from a subordinate to a higher rank. While the scale of emoluments for the several ranks varies within certain limits in different regiments, and in different years, it may be of interest to mention that a careful examination of the pay rolls for a period extending over nearly twenty years reveals an average approximating the salaries given in the following statement:—

kumedān (commandant), Rs. 60 to Rs. 150 a month;
adjutant, Rs. 30 to Rs. 60; mahzur†, Rs. 21 to Rs. 25;
subadār, Rs. 20 to Rs. 30; jam'dār, Rs. 15 to Rs. 22;
hawāldār, Rs. 13 to Rs. 15; nāik, Rs. 10 to Rs. 12;
sārjan (sergeant), Rs. 8 to Rs. 12; phuriya, Rs. 7-8-0 to Rs. 10; sepoy Rs. 7 to Rs. 8-8-0.

* The original reads ਖੁਰੀਯਾ and is the Panjābi form of the French fourrier which means a quarter-master sergeant.

² The non-combatants comprised on an average 5 jhandā-bardārs, 5 gharyālīs, 10 beldārs, 10 mistrīs, 10 saggās and a large number of kāmās (bullock-drivers) and taihlīyās (grooms).

† ਮਹਜੂਰ is probably a corrupted form of the French majeur. This is evidently due to the fact that Ranjit Singh's army was trained and officered by the French Generals Ventura, Allard and others.

Establishment—

khalāsi, Rs. 4 per month ; saqqa, Rs. 4 ; gharyāli, Rs. 4 ;
sirbān Rs. 4-5 ; ḡhandā-bardār, Rs. 4-5 ; beldār, Rs. 5-6 ;
 and mistri, Rs. 6-7

In the artillery branch the rate of pay was much the same as in the infantry. In the cavalry it was much higher. A sowār was paid between Rs. 20 and Rs. 26 a month and a risāl-dār (a rank similar to that of a ṣubadār of infantry) Rs. 40 to Rs. 48.

The scale given above, it should be noted, is that which was generally followed during the lifetime of Ranjīt Singh. After his death the army became all powerful and forced successive rulers to increase their pay.

It will be instructive to give in a tabular form the strength of the regular army at different times during the Sikh rule. The figures given below will show how during his own lifetime the Mahārāja kept the size and expenditure of his army within proper limits, and how within seven years after his death, both the strength of the army and the amount paid on account of salaries, were very considerably increased. The size of the army was almost doubled while the expenditure rose in even greater proportion :—

The regular army of the Mahārāja was the best organised department of the State. It was in fact the only department that throughout his reign claimed his unremitting attention. Having once introduced the European methods of drill, Ranjīt Singh was always anxious to bring his regulars up to the level of the Company's troops. With this object, he took into his service a large number of Europeans, some of whom proved to be very capable officers. The result was that his army was kept in a most efficient state of equipment and training.

The Sikhs under these officers soon mastered the complicated manœuvres of a European army and all the tactics of European warfare. And, in 1846, when their efficiency was put to a severe test they were found equal to the occasion. Cunningham, speaking of the first Sikh war, says: "the guns of the Sikhs were served with rapidity and precision, and the foot soldiers stood between and behind their batteries, firm in their order and active with their musket. The resistance met by the English on this occasion was wholly unexpected, and it was at Ferozeshah for the first time that the Indian and the British soldiers of the English armies met an equal antagonist with their own weapons—even ranks and the fire of artillery."

Thus the value of discipline and the European methods of fighting introduced among his men by the sagacious Ranjīt had borne their fruit, and if the Sikhs lost the day at Ferozeshah, it was mainly for want of competent and honest commanders.

"Never did a native army having so relatively slight an advantage in numbers fight a battle with the British in which the issue was so doubtful as at Ferozeshah; and if the victory was decisive, opinion remains divided as to what the result might have been if the Sikh troops had found commanders with sufficient capacity to give their qualities full opportunity."¹

SUMMARY CATALOGUE.

Part I of the volume deals with 39 bundles relating to the pay rolls of the regular army, from Sambat 1876 to 1905 (1819—1848 A.D.). Of these, 10 relate only to the troops stationed in Peshāwar, Kulu, Bannu and Tonk at different times, whereas the remaining 29 contain the rolls of the entire regular army. The pay rolls from Sambat 1868 to 1873 (1811—16 A.D.) will be found in the bundles relating to General Revenues (to be issued in volume II); the rolls from Sambat 1873 to 1876 (1816—19 A.D.) are missing as well as those for Sambat years 1884, 1889 and 1896. The pay rolls of cavalry regiments from Sambat 1890 onwards (with the exception of those treated in Bundle Aa 25 (ii)) are also missing.

In studying the rolls, the following points should be borne in mind :—

First.—The units, whether a palṭan (battalion) of infantry, a ḍerah (battery) of artillery, a rajman (regiment) of cavalry, or, as afterwards, a brigade of all the three arms, were, as a rule, called after the name of their commanding officers.

Secondly.—That the 'date of rolls' given under each head or sub-head, denotes a period covered by several sets of pay rolls. As explained on page 127, the troops were paid only five times in the year. The pay rolls of an official year accordingly comprise 5 sets. The number of folios noted under each of the sub-heads is the total number of the papers contained in all the sets of pay rolls under that sub-head.

Bundle No. Aa. 1.—Total folios 1,464; size $7\frac{3}{4}'' \times 5\frac{1}{4}''$; written in shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Dīwān Ajodhya Parshād.

Date of rolls.—Poh 1875—Chet 1877 (January 1819—April 1820 A. D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains pay rolls of (i) 13 battalions of infantry, (ii) 3 regiments of cavalry, (iii) 4 ḍeraks (units) of artillery and (iv) descriptive-rolls of some 20 men newly taken into service. The contents of the bundle have been arranged as follows :—

- (i) Pay rolls of infantry.
- (ii) " " " cavalry.
- (iii) " " " artillery covering lophāna and zambūrakḥāna.
- (iv) chikra mulāzimān sarkār.

Remarks.—The strength of a battalion—as will be noticed from the details given in the succeeding pages—varied from four to six hundred men. The total number of men as borne on the rolls for the months of Kātik and

Māngh 1876 including the *faqlānadārs*¹ was 9,334 men whose monthly salary amounted to Rs. 77,735, the distribution among the three arms being—

(iv) Pay rolls of Beldars, &c.

Under the above head have been arranged pay rolls of the beldārs and sārbāns attached to the regular army.

BALAMTĪR.*

Under the above head have been arranged details of pay relating to groups of recruits and other untrained men taken from several battalions and placed under a drill instructor ; folios 12.

* Corrupted form of the English word Volunteer, but the use of the word to denote recruits under training appears unusual.

² Regiment No. (2) in the rolls of the previous years appeared as regiment Hira Singh, and under No. (3) have been arranged rolls of only a portion of Mahtāb Singh's regiment.

Bundle No. Aa 3.—Total folios 1,486; size 7" × 4½"; written in a mixed shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Dīwān Ajodhya Parshād.

Date of rolls.—Phāgan 1877—Māngh 1878 (March 1821—February 1822 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains pay rolls of (i) 14 battalions of infantry, (ii) 4 regiments of cavalry, (iii) 8 ḍeraḥs (units) of artillery and (iv) beldārs, etc., comprising the regular army. Papers in the bundle have been arranged in the following order :—

- (i) Pay rolls of infantry.
- (ii) " " " cavalry.
- (iii) " " " artillery, covering topkhāna and zambūrakkhāna.
- (iv) " " " beldārs and sārbāns, etc.

Remarks.—During the winter of Sambat 1878 Ranjīt Singh conquered Bhakhar, Mankera and Derah Ismā'il Khān. From the evidence of the rolls it appears that some of these battalions took part in reduction of these forts and were subsequently posted in the newly-conquered territories.

NOTE.—In the rolls of the previous year battalions Nos. 1, 5 and 7 appeared as palṭan 'Aziz Khān, Balwant Singh and Bāpu Amir Singh respectively.

Date of rolls.—Phāgan 1877—Māngh 1878.

* The word bharmar sounds like a Panjabi word although its exact significance is not known. The Pharmārs (Bharmar) were long matchlocks which it took a strong man to carry; they were used as wall pieces, or supported on a light forked tripod attached to the stock, were used in the field and in skilful hands were deadly weapons — Calcutta Review, 1844, volume 1, page 484. A few specimens of the bharmar are preserved in the Lahore Museum and the Fort.

¹ Husain Khān was adjutant in this battalion and the rolls of the previous years show him as acting Commandant. In Sambat 1878 he was confirmed in his post on Rs. 100 a month.

² Commandant 'Ibādullah being killed in the battle of Mankera, the adjutant Imām Shāh was promoted to succeed him in the command.

³ This company of orderlies comprised men detached from different battalions and employed as orderlies of the Mahārāja.

(iv) Pay rolls of Beldars, &c.

Under the above head have been arranged pay rolls of the sārbāns and beldārs, etc., attached to the regular army, as well as the rolls of the guards quartered over the Khawābgāh or King's sleeping apartment; folios 59.

Bundle No. Aa. 4 (i).—Total folios 1,271; size $7\frac{1}{2} \times 5$ "; written in shikasta.

Official in-charge.—Diwān Ajodhya Parshād.

Date of rolls.—Phāgan 1879—Māngh 1880 (March 1823—February 1824 A.D.).

Contents.—This bundle contains pay rolls of (i) 14 infantry battalions, (ii) 10 derahs (units) of artillery, (iii) 'amla and (iv) miscellaneous accounts. The contents of the bundle have been arranged in the following order:—

- (i) Pay rolls of infantry.
- (ii) " " " artillery, covering topkhāna and zumbūrakkhāna.
- (iii) " " " 'amla.
- (iv) jam' kharch papers.

NOTE.—The rolls of cavalry regiments have not been traced.

Remarks.—Total strength of the army including fauj-i-khāss as borne on the rolls for the months of Poh—Māngḥ 1880 (January—February 1824 A.D.) stood at 15,025 men, whose monthly salary amounted to Rs. 1,38,048. This number was distributed among the three arms as follows :—

					Rs.
Infantry	...	11,681 men,	salary Rs. 84,161 per month,	average	7.2 per head.
Cavalry	...	1,656	„ „	Rs. 41,609	„ „ 25.1 „ „
Artillery (com- prising 47 guns).	...	1,688	„ „	Rs. 12,270	„ „ 7.3 „ „

- (12)³ „ Mastān Singh ; folios 68.
- (13) „ Haryār Singh ; folios 83.

NOTE.—In the rolls of the previous year battalions Nos. 1, 2, 6 and 7 appeared as palṭan Shaikh 'Ibādulla, Najaf Khān, Bakhtawar Khān, and 'Aziz Khān respectively.

Date of rolls—Phagan 1879—Māngḥ 1880 (March 1823—February 1824 A. D.)

GALLA JADĪDĀN⁴.

Under the above head have been arranged papers relating to the payment made to recruits under training. By the end of Sambat 1880 they were distributed over several battalions.

¹ Dewa Singh's battalion was transferred to fauj-i-khāss in the month of Kātik : hence the pay rolls cover only first eight months of the year.

² As regards No. 8 it was raised towards the end of Sambat 1878 (1821 A.D.) and was composed of Mālwa Sikhs. It was placed under one Mr. Garron who was employed on Rs. 60 a month to train the men in European drill. Sir Richard Temple perhaps wrongly suggests that Mr. Garron stands for Carron a secret Agent of the British Government. See page 353 "Memoirs of Alexander Gardner." In the month of Phāgan 1880 (February 1824 A.D.) the battalion was tacked on to fauj-i-khāss.

⁴ galla literally means a herd or a pack, and jadīd means new, recent. It denoted a party of men under a drill instructor, but not yet assigned to any particular battalion. The word galla is, even to-day, very commonly used to denote a party of military recruits.

(iii) Pay rolls of ‘Amla.

Under the above head have been arranged pay rolls of beldārs, sārbāns and other miscellaneous establishments, including the pālki-bearers, farrāsh, &c., attached to the regular army; folios 30.

(iv) Jam‘ kharch papers.

The set of papers (10 folios), headed “jam‘ kharch,” contains returns of credit and debit accounts relating to the following heads:—

- (i) Income from the rent of shops in the regimental bazārs.
- (ii) Sale-proceeds of the personal property of men dying without heirs, a sum of Rs. 3 being generally deducted for his kafn dāfn, i.e., to defray the expenses of his funeral.
- (iii) A return of in‘am, or customary bestowal of khil‘ats, and cash given to the Infantry officers on the occasion of Dāṣehra and Diwāli festivals.

* The original reads جور. It seems a corrupted form of some foreign name although I have not been able to identify it clearly with any name amongst those given in the lists of European officers appended to Memoirs of Alexander Gardner and The Reigning family of Lahore, by G. Smyth. It may probably be misspelt for Argoud, a French man in the service of Ranjit Singh (see Gardner, page 841). Smyth gives this name as Argou.

(iv) Pay rolls of Beldars.

Under the above head have been arranged pay rolls of the beldārs and sārbāns, etc., attached to the regular army; folios 26.

Bundle No. Aa 8.—Total folios 1,941; size $7\frac{1}{2}$ " \times 5"; written in shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Diwān Ajodhya Parshād.

Date of rolls.—Phāgan 1884- Chet 1886 (March 1828—April 1829 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains pay rolls of (i) 14 battalions of infantry, (ii) 5 regiments of cavalry, (iii) 15 derahs (units) of artillery and (iv) miscellaneous. The arrangement of papers in the bundle is as follows :—

- (i) Pay rolls of infantry.
- (ii) " " " cavalry.
- (iii) " " " artillery covering topkhāna and zambūrakhāna.
- (iv) Miscellaneous.

Remarks.—On examining these rolls it will appear that during the preceding ten years, the Mahārāja tried to improve the organisation, quality and strength of his army. Qualified European officers were taken into service to train men in methods of European drill. A model brigade (fauj-i-khāss) was raised in Sambat 1879. The minimum strength of a battalion was raised from 400 to 700 men. The artillery branch was re-organised. The practice of attaching guns (on the average 2) to each battalion of infantry, hitherto followed, was given up and the entire topkhāna was divided into two sections, namely, topkhāna jinsi or heavy and mixed batteries and topkhāna aspi or the horse and light field batteries—each placed under an officer of the rank of a General.

Total strength of the army in Sambat 1885 (1828 A.D.)—including that of the 4 infantry battalions and 2 regiments of cavalry constituting fauj-i-khāss—whose rolls have not been traced—stood at 23,948 men, whose monthly salary amounted to Rs. 2,48,644, the distribution among the three arms being—

	Rs.	Rs.
Infantry ... 15,825 men, salary 1,16,284 per month, average		7.3 per head
Cavalry ... 4,345 " " " 1,03,970 " " " "		23.7 " "

NOTE.—Pay rolls of Fauj-i-khāss have not been traced.

Remarks.—The figures given below will show that during the five years, from Sambat 1886 to 1890 (1829—1833 A.D.), the infantry branch was considerably strengthened though the cavalry and artillery did not witness any valuable addition to their numbers. During the year the total strength of the regular army including Fauj-i-khāss—whose rolls are missing—stood at 27,282 men whose salary amounted to Rs. 2,84,407 per month, the distribution among the three arms being—

	Rs.	Rs.
Infantry ... 20,577 men, salary 1,67,962 per month, average		8.1 per head
Cavalry ... 3,914 " " 86,544 " " "		22.1 " "
Artillery ... 8,162 " " 25,089 " " "		7.6 " "

Official-in-charge.—Bakhshi Bhagat Rām.

Date of rolls.—Phāgan 1894—Māngh 1895 (March 1838—February 1839 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains pay rolls of (i) 24 battalions of infantry and (ii) 19 derahs of artillery. The arrangement of papers in the bundle is as follows:—

- (i) Pay rolls of infantry.
 (ii) „ „ „ artillery covering topkhāna and zambūrakkhāna.

NOTE.—In connection with this year see also Bundle No. Aa 17 (ii).

Remarks.—The rolls arranged in this bundle will show that within last 10 years, considerable improvements were made in the organisation of the army.

The practice of forming bigger units or brigades consisting of proportionate strength of the three arms—infantry, cavalry and artillery—was introduced in Sambat 1891, and the rank of the officer commanding such a unit was raised from that of a commandant to that of a colonel or general.

The size and expenditure of the army as well shows a considerable rise. Including battalions stationed at Peshāwar and sent on other detached duties, the total regular troops at the close of Sambat 1895 (1839 A.D., i.e., a little before the Mahārāja's death) were 31 battalions of infantry, 7 regiments of cavalry, 19 derahs (units) of artillery, the distribution among the three arms being—

		Rs.		Rs.
Infantry ...	26,617 men,	salary 2,27,660 per month,	average 7.7 per head.
Cavalry ...	4,090 „ „	90.375 „ „	22 „ „
Artillery ...	4,535 „ „	32,906 „ „	7.2 „ „

The figures given above, when compared with those given on page 8, will show that the strength of regular army had grown fourfold in the last twenty years of Ranjit Singh's rule. The small beginning which he made with a handful of Purbiyās, about thirty years back, had now swelled into a big army of 38,000, well-disciplined men, trained and drilled under his able European officers Ventura, Allard, Court, Avitabile and others.

¹A writer contributing to the Calcutta Review, 1844, page 153, estimates the strength of this contingent at 3,270 men. The discrepancy in the figures given above and those in the journal is not easy to explain until the source of information of the writer is known. It may possibly be due to some of the irregular cavalry which the writer perhaps included in the figures given by him.

Official-in-charge.—Bakhshi Bhagat Rām.

Date of rolls.—Poh 1896—Asūj 1898 (January 1840—October 1841 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains pay rolls of (i) 8 battalions of infantry, (ii) 2 derahs (units) of artillery, (iii) few companies of belldārs, and (iv) the details of miscellaneous accounts covering jam' kharch, taqsim and iam' kharch amānat. The papers in the bundle have been arranged in the following order:—

(i) Pay rolls of infantry.

(ii) „ „ „ artillery.

(iii) „ „ „ belldārs, etc.

(iv) Miscellaneous accounts.

Remarks.—The pay rolls of the army for the year Sambat 1896 have not been traced in the papers of the khāisa dartār record. But a careful examination of bundles No. Aa 18 (i), Aa 19, Aa 20 (i) and Aa 20 (ii) will show that a substantial addition in the infantry and artillery branches of army was made during the year. The former was strengthened by the creation of five new battalions and the latter was increased by two derahs (units) of horse guns.

The rolls contained in this bundle relate to the division stationed in Peshāwar.

¹This battalion formerly belonged to Sardā Hari Singh Nalwa, but on the death of this celebrated General in the battle of Jamrud, it was transferred to the direct service of the State.

Official-in-charge.—Bakhshi Bhagat Rām.

Date of rolls.—Katik 1897—Mangh 1897 (November 1840—February 1841 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains pay rolls of (i) 26 battalions of infantry, (ii) 22 deruhs (units) of artillery and (iii) miscellaneous accounts covering amanat and kasrat items. Papers in the bundle have been arranged in the following order:—

- (i) Pay rolls of infantry.
- (ii) " " artillery covering topkhāna and zambūrak-khāna.
- (iii) Miscellaneous.

Remarks.—In addition to the consolidated salaries of 4 months from November 1840 to February 1841, the pay rolls arranged in the bundle detail the disbursement of one month's pay distributed as in'ām to a part of the army which was present in Lahore in January 1841, and had supported Sher Singh in his attempt to secure for himself the throne of Ranjit Singh.

On the 15th of Katik 1897 (5th November 1840 A.D.) when Mahārāja Kharak Singh and his son, Prince Nau Nihāl, breathed their last—one dying a natural death and the other killed by accident or design—two claimants appeared for the vacant throne. The first was Rāni Chand Kaur, widow of Mahārāja Kharak Singh; the second, Prince Sher Singh, a reputed son of Mahārāja Ranjit Singh, a brave soldier who possessed some influence with the army. Chand Kaur claimed the vacant throne for the expected son of Nau Nihāl Singh (his wife being pregnant at the time of his death), her claims being supported by the Sindhānwāliās and a few other powerful Chiefs. Sher Singh was favoured by the Dogra party, at the head of which was Rāja Dhian Singh and his brothers, Rājās Gulāb Singh and Suchet Singh, with Misar (afterwards Rāja) Lāl Singh and others. For the time being, an amicable settlement was arrived at, and it was agreed by both parties that Rāni Chand Kaur should exercise supreme power as regent till the widow of Nau Nihāl Singh was delivered of a son. In reality Dhiān Singh was not pleased with this change of affairs, since he wanted Sher Singh to be Mahārāja. He accordingly advised him to retire to his estates in Batāla, himself repaired to Jammu, on the score of ill-health. But during his absence he left his agents in Lahore and kept himself in communication with the officers of the army, and in a month's time succeeded in winning over many of them to his side on promises of in'āms and increased pay. Assurances of allegiance and support being given by the troops present in Lahore, Sher Singh made his appearance before the walls of the city and laid siege to the fort. The history of the siege of Lahore is too well known to be repeated here. For five days the garrison held out bravely against the whole Sikh army which lost in the assault a great number of men. On the sixth, the wily Dhiān Singh reached Lahore and opened negotiations of peace with his brother, Gulāb Singh, who had allied himself with the Queen. On the seventh day the fort was surrendered and Sher Singh was seated on the throne. The Khālṣa soldiery now demanded the fulfilment of the promises held out to them, and we find from the rolls that with the disbursement of the monthly salary, each unit of the army was given one month's pay as in'ām. The rolls further show that a couple of months after this, their pay was also permanently raised.

(iii) Miscellaneous.

Under the above head have been arranged papers relating to miscellaneous items of amānat and kasrat accounts ; folios 45.

Bundle No. Aa 19 (ii).—Total folios 735 ; size $7\frac{1}{2}'' \times 5''$; written in shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Bakhshi Amrīk Rāi.

Date of rolls.—Poh 1896—Māngḥ 1897 (January 1840—February 1841 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains pay rolls of (i) 9 battalions of infantry and (ii) few troops of artillery formed by detaching gunners from several derahs. The papers in the bundle have been arranged as follows :—

(i) Pay rolls of infantry.

(ii) „ „ „ artillery.

Remarks.—The papers contained in the bundle cover the pay rolls of a part of the force despatched under the joint command of General Ventura and Sardar Ajit Singh Sindhānwālia to annex the Hill States of Kulu and Maudī. General Ventura's division included the special brigade (fauj-i-khāss) and three other battalions of infantry while that of Ajit Singh comprised two battalions of infantry and one troop of artillery commanded by Hāfiz Bakhsh together with little irregular cavalry.

The rolls of irregular cavalry which formed a part of this force have not been traced in the bundle ; a correct estimate, therefore, of the total force despatched cannot be made.

- (1) derah Hāfiz Bakhsh.
- (2) „ Mazhar ‘Ali Beg.
- (3) „ Mewa Singh.
- (4) „ Bakhtāwar Khān.

Date of rolls.—Bisākh—Māṅgh 1897; folios 10.

Bundle No. Aa 20 (i).—Total folios 4,007; size $7\frac{1}{2}'' \times 5''$; written in shikasta.

Officer-in-charge.—Bakhshī Bhagat Rām.

Date of rolls.—Phāgan 1897—Māṅgh 1898 (March 1841 February 1842 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains pay rolls of (i) 37 battalions and 14 miscellaneous companies of infantry, (ii) 25 derahs (units) of artillery and (iii) beldārs and sārbāns attached to the regular army. The papers in the bundle have been arranged as follows:—

- (i) Pay rolls of infantry.
- (ii) „ „ „ artillery covering topkhāna and zambīrakhāna.
- (iii) „ „ „ beldārs, etc.

Remarks.—The pay rolls contained in this bundle reveal on examination two important points bearing on the regular army, namely, (i) the raising of general scale of pay and (ii) the increase in the numerical strength.

With regard to (i) it may be remarked with some accuracy that the pay of a sepoy was raised by rupee one per month and that of the company officers from rupee one to rupees three per month according to their ranks. The regimental officers were given promotion, of both pay and rank. As to the numerical strength it will be noticed from the numbers borne on the rolls of the year that

* Palāṭan is plural of palṭan.

¹This battalion was raised in Sambat 1896, and was attached to the brigade commanded by General Court.

within a short period of eight months about six thousand new men were added to the service in the form of eight battalions of infantry and three derahs of artillery. Old guns were taken out from the forts and repaired, and several new ones were cast in the royal foundries in Lahore.

COMPANY-HÁ.

Under the above head have been arranged pay rolls of miscellaneous companies of infantry and cavalry soldiers serving as orderlies of the King, or placed as guards on public buildings, etc. They comprise, carbineers, matchlockmen, the jazairchi, the spearsmen and the bharmār men, etc. Each of these companies was a self-contained and independent unit. They have been arranged in the following 3 groups :—

Group (i).

Group (i) relates to the pay rolls of 7 companies serving as body-guards of the King ; folios 83.

Group (ii).

Group (ii) relates to the pay rolls of 2 companies attending upon the person of the royal princes ; folios 15.

¹In the rolls of the previous years this battalion was designated as paltan Apār Singh.

²*topkhāna* Ilāhi Bakhsh will subsequently appear as topkhāna Canara (Canora) Sahib ; Captain Canara was an American employed in Sambat 1896 (1833 A.D.) Smyth has one Kumarah on his list of the Europeans in Ranjit Singh's service, whereas Alexander Gardner spells this name as Canora. He was retained in service for sometimes even after the annexation of the Panjab by the British Government. (See selections from the Panjab Records Volume ; published by the Panjab Government.

³Both of the battalions commanded by Bishan Singh were raised in the beginning of Sambat 1898. The pay rolls for the months previous to Kātik have not been traced ; it were the abstract statements of the pay returns that could be found for those months.

Group (iii).

Group (iii) relates to the pay rolls of 5 companies placed as guards upon Government buildings ; folios 53.

Official-in-charge.—Bakhshi Bhagat Rām.

Date of rolls.—Bisākh 1898—Asūj 1899 (May 1841—October 1842 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains pay rolls of (i) 21 battalions and few miscellaneous companies of infantry, (ii) 8 derahs (units) of artillery, and (iii) items of miscellaneous accounts covering several minor heads. The papers in the bundle have been arranged as follows :—

- (i) Pay rolls of infantry covering battalions and miscellaneous companies
- (ii) „ „ „ artillery covering topkhāna and zambūrakḥāna.
- (iii) Miscellaneous accounts.

Remarks.—It will be noticed from the details of dates given in the succeeding pages that all the troops whose rolls are arranged in this bundle were not stationed in Peshāwar for the entire period of 18 months covered by these rolls. The peace strength of the Peshāwar division, which consisted of 8 battalions of infantry and 10 or 12 pieces of artillery and a little of irregular cavalry, was only strengthened in the middle of Sambat 1898 (November 1841 A.D.) probably because of the troubles in Kābul.

- (ii) „ „ „, artillery covering lophāna and zambūrahkhāna.
- (iii) „ „ „, beldārs and sārbāns.
- (iv) Miscellaneous accounts.

Remarks.—Besides the pay rolls, the bundle contains two important lists—one relating to the izāfa or increment in the pay of the army and the other to the distribution of in'ām given by Rāja Hira Singh to the troops for their loyal support in his hour of struggle against the Sindhānwālīās.

Between the Sindhānwālīās and the Dogra parties the greatest enmity existed. Both had possessed great power and influence during the later years of Ranjit Singh's reign, and each looked with jealousy and suspicion upon its rival. On the death of the Mahārāja, each desired to possess undisputed power. But the hopes of the Sindhānwālīās were, for the time being, frustrated when Sher Singh ascended the throne after a bloody struggle. On the surrender of the Fort of Lahore in January 1841 to Sher Singh, almost all the members of Sindhānwālīā family, with the exception of Shamsheer Singh, fled from the Panjab. Their estates were confiscated, and they remained as if in exile for one year when they were re-taken into favour in October 1842 at the intercession of Bhāi Rām Singh. Though outwardly reconciled, they seem to have stuck to their plan of removing out of their way both the Mahārāja and his minister, and to wield the whole power of the State as guardians of young Dalip. With Sher Singh they plotted the murder of his minister whom he both hated and feared, and with Dhiān Singh they conspired against the life of the Mahārāja; and in the end succeeded in killing both on the 14th September 1843. But the victory was not so easy as they perhaps thought, and nor did the course of events run very smooth. In Hira Singh, Rāja Dhiān Singh had a son not less clever than himself, but decidedly more than a match for his father's inveterate enemies, the Sindhānwālīās. He was determined to avenge the death of his father. He approached the panches of the army and by holding out to them promises of large in'āms and increased pay at once gained them over; and attacked and captured the fort where Ajit Singh and Lehna Singh had taken refuge. Both these chiefs were killed, and Hira Singh was proclaimed wazir of the kingdom. On his having secured the wazārat Hira Singh lost no time in fulfilling his promises to the army. He increased their pay and also granted one month's pay as gratuity to the whole army: both of these lists will be found arranged in series (iv) of the bundle.

Total strength of the army as borne on the rolls for the year Sambat 1900 stands at 5 battalions of infantry, 8 regiments and 3 rīsālās of cavalry, and 28 derahs (units) of artillery, the distribution among the three arms being:—

		Rs.		Rs.
Infantry	... 37,791 men, salary	4,83,056 per month, average	12·7	per head.
Cavalry	... 5,381 „ „	1,61,660 „ „	30	„ „
Artillery	... 8,280 „ „	82,793 „ „	9·9	„ „

Total ... 51,472 men with a salary of 7,27,509 per month.

PART II.

IRREGULAR CAVALRY.

The irregular cavalry of Ranjit Singh may be divided into two parts,—the one comprising the contingents supplied by the jāgīrdārs or fief-holders and the other the ghorcharāh force paid directly from the State Treasury.

Introductory remarks.

In the former class, the grantees had to furnish efficient and well-equipped troopers whenever required by the State, the number of the horses maintained being determined by the value of the fief. On the day of the Dasahra, every jāgīrdār was required to present himself at the general review when a strict muster of his contingent was taken by the Mahārāja in person. The services of these sowārs, however, were being put in constant requisition throughout the year either to chastise a refractory chief or to realize revenues from defaulting zamīndārs, etc.

The salaried ghorcharāhs constituted the standing cavalry force. The old system of feudal levies was unconsciously yielding place to the new method of standing armies. A bare outline of the change may be given below.

In the earliest stages of the rise of the khālṣa every Sikh soldier could get himself enrolled in the national army and fight under the banner of any chief. This army (dal khālṣa) was convoked by the *akālīs*¹ of Amritsar at times of national peril. It was, in fact, a force which temporarily united individual plunderers into an army against a common foe. The soldiers were paid out of a common fund to which all contributed by plunder, and they disbanded as soon as the purpose for which they were convened was achieved. In such a state of things, the personal tie between the soldier and the chief was but weak, and we constantly find Sikh soldiers of the period transferring allegiance from one chief to another. Towards the end of the 18th century, however, we find a tendency on the part of some chiefs to keep an organised band of soldiers around them.

History.

By about 1770 A.D. we find that the more important chiefs had established themselves into the well-known twelve independent *misl*s of the Panjab. These chiefs had each his own territory, treasure and followers, and each misl became, in fact, a miniature kingdom.

¹ The akālīs were a body of warrior priests who held charge of the temple at Amritsar.

As the Durrāni Kingdom of Kabul became more and more enfeebled by internal strife, the Sikhs no longer apprehended any serious danger to their faith from that quarter, and not only did the national spirit of co-operation, which had marked their early rise, begin to vanish but these chiefs were soon engaged in mutual jealousies and quarrels. It became important for the chiefs, therefore, to maintain their military strength. The soldier was still paid out of the plunder in successful raids, but as gradually the soldiery began to get portions of the lands they had helped to conquer, they began to regard themselves as partners with their chief, and consequently the sentiments of loyalty and allegiance became stronger.

Side by side with this, another important change was going on. In the early days of their rise, the entire khālṣa was a camp of fighting men, and any Sikh who possessed adequate proficiency in arms could and did become a member of the dal khālṣa and claim his share of the spoil. As the mislḍārs established their power, a large number of these people took to ploughing and other peaceful occupations, and some protection of property and person was secured. The soldier became a distinct unit of society and the militant khālṣa was transformed into a professional soldier.

We thus see three clear stages in this evolutionary process. First we have the khālṣa soldier fighting for his religion and being remunerated out of a common fund raised by plunder. In the second stage he is fighting both for religion and for plunder under the banner of a chieftain of his own choice and still being paid out of the spoils of conquest. Lastly, we see that he has adopted fighting as a profession, that is, as a means of livelihood.

It was at about this time that Ranjit Singh appeared on the scene and by his great natural talents gave a definite form and direction to these movements. He perceived that if he could not abolish the custom of granting fiefs for military service, he should discourage it wherever possible. He preferred a regularly paid standing army to a band of followers loosely associated by vague hopes of plunder, and, accordingly, early in his reign he raised a regiment of salaried ghorcharāh sowār. A few years later he raised another regiment known as that of the khāṣṣ orderlies. These two regiments served as a nucleus of the standing cavalry which subsequently swelled into a large army.

The general body of the ghorcharāhs was classified as the ghorcharāh khāṣṣ and the mislḍārs. The former comprised only one regiment which was exclusively recruited from amongst the noble families of the province, while the latter term, mislḍār, denoted those smaller chiefs who, on the overthrow of their independent power, took up service under Ranjit Singh with their respective bands of horsemen. Those whom he dispossessed of their lands and property he thought himself bound to compensate and to provide for. To those who were of peaceable disposition he granted a small cash allowance, while the chieftain and his trained warriors were readily taken over into the army. In fact, the major portion of Ranjit Singh's irregular cavalry was the outcome of this line of policy.

The troops of the Rāmgarhia Sardārs and those of Milkha Singh Thepuria formed two big derahs or divisions and the followers of the subordinate chiefs were amalgamated en bloc to the chahāryāri and the Orderly Corps.

The irregular cavalry is, in the khālṣa darbār records, variously designated as the ghorcharāh fauj, sowāri fauj and fauj be-qawā'id. The last of these designations was probably given to distinguish it from the qawā'id-dān or regular army and appears more appropriate in as much as it explained its character and constitution.

Be-qawā'id literally means that which follows no prescribed rules, and since this branch of the army did not accept the introduction of European methods of military drill and discipline, which were enforced by the Maharāja with full vigour in his regular army, the ghorcharāhs were known as the be-qawā'id fauj.

There was neither any system of regimentation in its ranks, nor was the entire irregular force placed under any one man holding the chief command. This force was divided into several derahs, each of which formed a complete unit.

Ordinarily a derah had on its regimental staff one Commander¹—although with no specified rank—assisted by one subordinate officer and clerical establishment consisting of a wakil, a writer and a pay munshi. The chief drummer or dhaṛṣa nawāz and the ensign or nishānchi were also borne on the list of the staff officers. To each derah was invariably attached one granthi or reader of the Sikh scriptures.

A derah itself was formed of several subordinate groups, technically called *misl*s. Each misl was composed of a band of horsemen who, being usually members of one clan, joined the army in company under the leadership of their chief, and the chief ever afterwards continued to act as the company officer when this group was incorporated into any particular derah.

A misl, therefore, like the company in a regiment, was a subordinate unit of the derah, though it had no resemblance with the latter in other respects. These misls had neither a fixed or uniform strength nor were they sub-divided into sections. The strength of a misl varied from 15 to 70, sometimes even more.

In Sambat 1879 (1822 A.D.) these derahs were grouped into several bigger divisions, each of which was placed under the control of a noble of high rank.

Misar Dīwān Chand, Jam'dār Khushhāl Singh, Sardār Lehna Singh, Majithia, Rāja Suchet Singh, the Sindhānwālia and the Attāriwāla Sardārs each commanded a division—the Mahārāja himself being the generalissimo of the army. This type of organization, it may be remarked, kept intact the spirit of clannish union and its old tendency of fighting under the immediate command of a natural leader, while it did not deny to the misdār the lessons of co-operation which the unity of a supreme command otherwise imparts.

On closely examining the names of the troopers and their sub-castes, as given in the pay rolls, it appears that the irregular cavalry was mostly composed of the Jāt Sikhs inhabiting the Doābs in the Central Panjab, the Hindu Rājputs of Jammu and Kāngra hills and the Muhammadan Rājputs occupying the present Jhelum and Gujar Khān tracts. The Pathāns, Khātris and Datta Brahmins also appear in the army lists, but the Rājputs and Jāts remained the predominant element.

The irregular cavalry was composed very largely of land-holders and jāgīrdārs. Their pay and emoluments were comparatively higher than those of the members of the regular army.

In the beginning, the Mahārāja, following the traditional practice, paid them by jāgīrs to the value of Rs. 300—Rs. 400 per annum per trooper. But gradually as their number increased and the practice of cash payment became more common, the salary of a trooper ranged between Rs. 250—Rs. 300 a year to start with, and out of this sum he had to provide for himself and his horse.

Ranjit Singh, it may be remarked, secured this fine material at a comparatively cheap cost—as it was not so much for his pay that a man joined the ghorcharāh ranks as for the love of fighting and the dignity attached to this branch of the army.

Strength of the irregular cavalry at various periods of the Sikh rule may be given as:—

Name of ruler.	Strength.	Expenditure on annual salary.		Average per head.

The ghorcharāh fauj of Ranjīt Singh represented the upper classes of society. It was recruited and officered from amongst the relatives and followers of those independent chiefs whom the Mahārāja had brought under subjection.

In his early days they were the right hand men of Ranjīt Singh and conquered for him the rich provinces of Jammu, Kāngra, Multān and Kashmir. In the most desperate ventures, where the tactics of his reformed or regular army failed, the bold and fearless ghorcharāhs often saved the situation. By their desperate courage they had earned for themselves a name, and for Ranjīt Singh a kingdom.

The proud bearing of a ghorcharāh—when riding his noble steed with his long tapering bamboo lance bending in the air and his silver-bossed shield rattling against his sword and pistol—won for him the admiration of every one who saw him. Baron Hugel—a Prussian traveller, who visited Ranjīt Singh's court in 1836—speaks of this cavalry in the following terms:—I requested leave to inspect them (the ghorcharāhs) and never beheld a finer nor a more remarkably striking body of men. Each one was dressed differently, and yet so much in the same fashion that they all looked in perfect keeping. The handsome Rājā Suchet Singh (commander of one of the biggest divisions) was in a similar costume, and reminded me of the time when the fate of empires hung on the point of a lance, and when the individual whose bold heart beat fearlessly under his steel breastplate was the sole founder of his fortunes. The strange troop before me was peculiarly Indian. The uniform consisted of a velvet coat or gaberdine, over which most of them wore a shirt of mail. Others had this shirt made to form a part of the tunic. A belt round the waist, richly embroidered in gold, supported the powder-horn, covered with cloth of gold as well as the Persian katār and the pistol which many of them carried in addition to those weapons. Some wore a steel helmet, inlaid with gold, and surmounted with kalgi or black heron's plume ; others wore a cap of steel, worked like a cuirass in rings. The left arm is often covered from hand to the elbow with a steel cuff inlaid with gold. The round Sikh shield hangs on the back fastened with straps across the chest, a quiver at the right side and a bow slung at the back being carried as part of the equipment ; a bag made in the belt holds the balls, and a tall bayonet, frequently ornamented with gold, held in the right hand when the man is on foot and carried over the shoulder when in the saddle, completes the dress."

SUMMARY CATALOGUE.

Part II of the volume deals with the following four bundles pertaining to the pay rolls of the irregular cavalry. Out of these four, one contains pay rolls and other miscellaneous papers relating only to derah khāṣṣ and the remaining three to those of the entire cavalry for a period of four years and six months from Chet 1901 to Bhādon 1905 (April 1844—September 1848 A.D.). The pay rolls for the previous years, i. e., from Sambat 1869 to 1900 (1811—1843 A.D.)—as explained in the introductory note—will be dealt with in volume II of the series. Here, too, some attempts have been made at presenting a connected account of this branch of the army, by way of adding short introductory notes to various derahs (regiments) comprising the ghorcharāh fauj. These notes are based, partly on the earlier pay rolls and partly on the invaluable works of Massy and Griffin (Chiefs and Families of Note in the Punjab) and Solān Lal (‘umdat-ul-tawārīkh).

Bundle No. Ab 1.—Total folios 2,300 ; size $7\frac{3}{4}'' \times 5\frac{1}{4}''$; written in a mixed shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Dīwān Dīna Nāth.

Date of rolls.—1892—Hār 1902 (1835—July 1846 A. D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains pay rolls and other miscellaneous papers pertaining to derah khāṣṣ. The contents of the bundle have been arranged as follows :—

- (i) barāwurd taqsim talab.
- (ii) khulāṣa barāwurd.
- (iii) taqdama.
- (iv) taqsim in‘ām.
- (v) jam‘ kharch tahwīl Rāja Hīra Singh.
- (vi) zambūrakkhāna.

Remarks.—The full designation of the regiment was derah farzand khāṣṣ Rāja Hīra Singhwāla and was more popularly known by its abbreviated title of derah khāṣṣ.

This regiment was evolved out of a nucleus of some 5 companies of Rājput troopers recruited by Ranjīt Singh from amongst the Dogras of Jammu when he annexed this tract to his Kingdom of Lahore. In Sambat 1874 (1877 A. D.) these Jamwāl Rājputs, as they were called, were detached from the general body of the ghorcharāh sowārs and organised into a smaller body of 261 strong known as the derah jamwālān. It then formed part of the force placed under Misr Dīwān Chand, zafar jang, on whose death in July 1825 it was placed under the command of Sardār Lehna Singh, Majithia. In 892 (1836 A. D.) the command was given to Rāja Hīra Singh and 5 more companies of Sikh troopers were added, raising its strength to 723 men. Thenceforward the regiment came to be known as the derah khāṣṣ as it was no longer composed of the Jamwāl Rājputs exclusively.

Rāja Hīra Singh, the first commander of the derah, was a great favourite of Ranjīt Singh and was styled by him as "farzand khāṣṣ." In fact Hira Singh was from very childhood taught to address the Mahārāja as bāpū (father). His father, Rāja Dhiān Singh, was one of the three Dogra brothers—Rāja Gulāb Singh and Suchet Singh being the other two—who, entering the Mahārāja's service in comparatively humble capacities, rose to the position of the greatest influence and power at the Lahore Court by personal address and ability. The part they played during the eight years after the death of Ranjit Singh forms an important chapter in the Sikh history, and is too well known to be detailed here.

Hira Singh was very carefully brought up by his father, Dhiān Singh, and his constant attendance at Court made him fully conversant with the policy of the Mahārāja. Early in Sambat 893 (1836 A. D.) Jasrota and the surrounding hill districts were placed under his administration, and he was given an independent command in this regiment. He was thus trained and prepared for the future struggle in which he took an important part. When his father, Rāja Dhiān Singh, was murdered by the Sindhānwālia faction in September 1843 A.D. Hira Singh, by a display of remarkable courage, skill and eloquence, won the army to his side and succeeded in establishing his position as warīr in his father's place. But soon after he lost popularity with the army for placing an implicit faith in his adviser Pandit Jala who was disliked equally by the Rāni, the Sardārs and the army. On 25th January 1845 the minister and his tutor while trying to make away for Jammu were slain by the troops and their heads publicly exhibited at the gates of the city.

As Hira Singh gained power the strength of the regiment shows a corresponding increase in number. From a nucleus of 261 sowārs in 1874 (1817 A. D.) it rose to 723 in Sambat 1892 (1835 A. D.). In Sambat 1896 (1839 A. D.) 8 other derahs of Sikh *misl*dārs were incorporated into the regiment, thus raising its strength to 1,377 men with an annual salary of Rs. 4,41,392. Mahārāja Sher Singh and Rāja Hira Singh still further added to its numbers and increased the pay till in Sambat 1901 (1844 A. D.) the strength is recorded at 2,089 men whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 7,51,768.

(i) Barawurd taqsim.

Under the above head have been arranged the detailed pay rolls of the derah. They are arranged in 11 separate sets, — each covering a period of one year—from 1892 to 1902 (1835—45 A.D.) ; folios 1,778.

(ii) Khulasa barawurd.

The papers arranged under the above head are the abstracts of pay returns of derah khāṣṣ from Sambat 1893 to 1899 (1836—42 A. D.) ; folios 143.

(iii) Taqdama

Under the above head have been arranged papers relating to the estimates of annual salary of derah khāṣṣ from Sambat 1893 to 1896 (1836—39 A.D.) ; folios 77

(iv) Taqsim in'am.

Under the above head have been arranged lists detailing the distribution of money gifts to the members of the derah on the accession of Mahārāja Dalip Singh ; folios 25.

(v) Jam' kharch.

Under the above head have been arranged statements of jam' kharch account pertaining to the derah khāss from Sambat 1893 to 1902 (1836—1845 A. D.); folios 178.

(vi) Zamburakkhana.

Under the above head have been arranged details of pay, etc., of the swivel guns attached to the derah khāss; folios 99.

Bundle No. Ab. 2.—Total folios 3,315; size 7½" × 5"; written in a mixed shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Diwān Amar Nāth.

Date of rolls.—Chet 1901—Har 1902 (March 1844—July 1845 A. D.).

Contents.—This bundle contains pay rolls of (i) 16 derahs of irregular cavalry and (ii) 8 derahs of artillery. The contents of the bundle have been arranged as follows:—

(i) Pay rolls of cavalry.

(ii) „ „ „ artillery covering zambūrakkhāna.

Remarks.—During the period covered by the rolls, the ministry of Rāja Hira Singh was overthrown and Sardār Jawāhir Singh had stepped in his place. Jawāhir Singh had personally never been popular with the army, but by a dint of continuous series of bribes and concessions, he contrived to hold on to his office for 8 months. These bribes in the official phraseology appear under the charming name of in'āms. A detailed account of their occasional distribution will be found as a sequel to the pay rolls of each of the above derahs.

The number of the troopers as borne on the rolls by the end of July 1845 stands at 17,621 men whose annual salary in cash and jāgīr amounted to Rs. 54,24,500.

These rolls have been arranged in two sets,—(i) from Chet to Phāgan 1901 (March 1844—February 1845 A. D.) and (ii) from Chet 1902 to Har 1902 (March—July 1845 A. D.)

DERAH GHORCHARĀH KHĀSS.

This regiment of ghorcharāh khāss, more popularly known as the regiment of the barā ghorcharāhs, was raised early in the beginning of the Mahārāja's reign and was recruited exclusively from amongst the noble families of the province. It was the Mahārāja's earliest attempt to create something in the nature of a standing army and may be looked upon as an important step in the devolution of the feudal military system. The object of its creation seems to have been on the one hand to have a body of faithful and trained warriors round the person of the Mahārāja, and on the other to draw the scions of noble families to the Court.

The aristocratic character of the regiment was more or less maintained almost to the end, and it continued to be regarded as the Mahārāja's finest cavalry regiment, composed as it was of the flower of the chivalry and nobility of the time. The regiment, like that of the Akālī Nihangs, enjoyed a great reputation for valour and often turned the scales when fortunes of battle seemed wavering. It distinguished itself in many desperate ventures and was engaged in almost all the battles of the Sikh period. It displayed great valour and resource at the battle of Peshāwar (the hardest fought battle of the Northern campaign), at Attock and again at Chilianwāla.

For gallantry, organisation and reputation it compares favourably with the Pretorian guards of the Roman emperors and the old Guard of Napoleon in more modern times.

On its constitution in Sambat 1869 (1812 A. D.) Dīwān Kishan Chand and Sardār Gulāb Singh Kapta were appointed its commandants. The former was succeeded on his death in Phāgan 1886 (March 1830 A.D.) by his nephew, Dīwān Devi Sahāi, who was thus elevated from his command in the derah Pindiwāla. Devi Sahāi continued to command the ghorcharāh regiment till the corps was finally disbanded in Sambat 1906 (1849 A. D.) on the transfer of the government to the British. It will thus be seen that this prize post remained in the family throughout.

Of the two commandants, it appears that Devi Sahāi rose high in the service of the State and had served in different military and diplomatic capacities. Besides the part he took in several campaigns as commander both of the derah Pindiwāla and of the ghorcharāhs he was employed on other important diplomatic missions. In Sambat 1894 (1837 A. D.) he was sent to Bombay in charge of the Embassy despatched there by the Mahārāja to meet the English and also "to acquire a knowledge of that province with special regard to its military and mercantile resources." In Sambat 1901 (1844 A. D.) he was appointed collector on the frontiers of Bannu-Tonk. Again in Phāgan 1902 (February 1846 A. D.) he was appointed on the body formed to consider the terms of the treaty executed between the British Government and the "State of Lahore" which closed the first Sikh War. In the same year he was employed with Sardār 'Atar Singh and Misar Rūp Lal as representative of the Khālṣa Darbār to demarcate the boundary line of the territory ceded to the British on the Kāngra side as a result of this treaty.

Strength.—From its strength of 800, as it stood in the beginning, it gradually rose to 1,320 during the lifetime of Ranjīt Singh. Mahārāja Sher Singh, Rāja Hira Singh and Sardār Jawāhir Singh added about 300 more, thus raising the numbers to 1,600 men, whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 6,20,000.

DERAH ARDALYĀN.

As a result of his disappointment at Multān in 1812 A. D. Ranjīt Singh set about re-organising his army. He accordingly added to the number of his irregular cavalry and raised a regiment of select orderlies (ardaly khāss), about 500 strong. To this nucleus were added several other regiments of the same name as they were raised from time to time.

The members of the Orderly Regiment, besides their military duties, were frequently employed on executive work of collecting taxes and presents.

In the beginning the regiment was commanded by Mahtāb Singh Bahādur Nagria and on his death in Sambat 1877 (1820 A.D.) he was succeeded by his brother, Bhīma Singh, who retained this post for 25 years, till the regiment was finally disbanded with the entire khāssa army.

For his honesty, faithfulness and loyalty, Bhīma Singh seems to have won the confidence of the Mahārāja. He was very frequently entrusted with the work of carrying State dastaks or orders to different chiefs and sardārs, and was honoured with khitā's on almost every occasion for executing his functions to the entire satisfaction of the Mahārāja. In Sambat 1887 (1830 A.D.) he was appointed to collect the revenues of Kashmīr and also to report in detail on the general condition of the country.

He joined service on Rs. 2,500 a year and in Sambat 1901 (1845 A.D.) he was drawing Rs. 6,000 a year, being the pay of a full General.

Early in Sambat 1874 (1817 A.D.) the Mahārāja raised two more regiments of orderlies and tacked them on to this derah. Again in Sambat 1879 (1822 A.D.) when Jam'dār Khushhāl Singh received command of a division of irregular army, a number of other companies of troopers were added en bloc to this regiment and henceforth it came to be treated as one big derah.

Under Mahtāb Singh this regiment rendered conspicuous service in the sieges of Attock and Multān. It also took part in the battle of Mankera and again in 1823 A.D. formed part of the division commanded by Jam'dār Khushhāl Singh in the Peshāwar campaign.

Strength.—From its strength of 500, as it stood in the beginning, it swelled, by subsequent additions of other regiments, to 2,000 in Sambat 1894 (1837 A.D.), a little before the Mahārāja's death. Under Mahārāja Sher Singh, Hīra Singh and Jawāhir Singh it witnessed considerable additions to its strength till in Sambat 1902 (1845 A.D.) we find the number recorded at 2866 men whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 9,20,000.

Date of rolls.—Chet 1901—Hār 1902 ; folios 567.

DERAH NAULAKHA.¹

Derah Naulakha was the collective name given to a number of companies of troopers cantoned in the vicinity of Naulakha and placed en masse under Rāja Suchet Singh. It was also more popularly known as derah chahārgāri.

The thirty-two companies composing this derah in Sambat 1879 (1822 A.D.) were raised at different dates though grouped into one big regiment for the first time in that year. As new companies were raised from time to time they were incorporated into this derah till their number reached 55 within the next twelve years.

¹These rolls pertain to Naulakha Khurd, whereas those relating to Naulakha Kalān have not been traced.

In Sambat 1892 (1835 A. D.) it was accordingly split up into two sections—Naulakha Kalān and Naulakha Khurd—the former being placed under Suchet Singh's Lieutenant Rāi Kesri Singh.

The Commander Rāja Suchet Singh was the youngest of the three Dogra brothers. The eldest Gulāb Singh had charge of their treasure, troops, cannons and fortresses at Jammu, while Dhīān Singh by virtue of his office of Prime Minister wielded immense influence and power at Court, and the gallant and handsome Suchet became the idol of the cavalry.

In 1843 A. D. when his nephew, Hira Singh, succeeded to the wazārat, Suchet Singh who had not been on the best of terms with him repaired to Jammu for the time being. But as he had a staunch supporter in Rāni Jindān he began to cherish hopes of the wazārat himself. Accordingly when in 1844 A. D. the news of estrangement between Hira Singh and the army reached Jammu, Suchet Singh set forth to supplant his nephew in the good graces of the troops. But Hira Singh, who was a clever intriguer, had already promised large bribes to the army and on Suchet Singh's arrival it declined to support him. A secret warning was conveyed to Suchet Singh, but the gallant Dogra rashly determined not to draw back. In spite of repeated warnings from the minister, he refused to retrace his steps to the hills. He was at last deserted by many of his own followers and fell fighting.

Strength.—The strength of the corps is recorded at 1,690 men in Sambat 1880 (1823 A. D.) and within the next twelve years it swelled to 2,674 by additions en bloc of a number of companies raised from time to time. In Sambat 1902 (1845 A.D.) again, as a result of considerable additions under the governments of Mahārāja Sher Singh, Hira Singh and Jawāhir Singh, the numbers rose to 4,192 whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 11,70,496.

Date of rolls.—Chet 1901—Hār 1902 ; folios 289.

DERAH RĀMGARHIA.

The Rāmgarhia Misl was one of the most powerful of the Sikh confederacies in the latter half of the eighteenth century. Under the leadership of Sardār Jassa Singh, the confederacy gradually increased its possessions and influence. Even after the death of this leader in 1803 A.D. Ranjit Singh, who was rapidly gaining in power and had already given proof of his future greatness, began to covet the Rāmgarhia territory. However, not feeling strong enough to break down its power at this stage, Ranjit Singh made friends with Jodh Singh who had succeeded his father, Jassa Singh, in the leadership of the misl. Jodh Singh did not possess the mettle of his father and consented to fight under the banner of Ranjit Singh, and like his other vassals received khitāts for meritorious services on several occasions from the Mahārāja. The confederacy thus ceased to exist as an independent power from 1804 A. D., although its possessions remained intact for another 12 years. In 1816 A. D., when Jodh Singh died, his sons were stripped of even this vestige of power. They were given small pensions and their territory annexed to the kingdom of Lahore. Their small force of 210 men was taken into the Mahārāja's service.

The regiment retained its old name, though a few years after its transfer Ranjit Singh nearly doubled its strength by the addition of troopers from different qeraks. This force was at first placed under General Misar Diwān Chand, on whose death in 1824 A.D. it was merged into a larger one commanded by Sardār Lehna Singh, Majithia.

Strength.—During the lifetime of Ranjit Singh it did not witness any considerable additions to its strength which is recorded at 448 men. Mahārāja Sher Singh, Rāja Hira Singh and Sardār Jawāhir Singh each added to its numbers, and in the pay rolls of Sambat 1902 (1845 A. D.) it is recorded at 740 men whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 2,30,000.

Date of rolls.—Chet 1901—Hār 1902 ; folios 192.

DERAH PINDĪWĀLA.

The first pay rolls of this regiment commence in Bisākh 1878 (May 1821 A. D.) when the force kept by Sardār Jiwan Singh was transferred to the service of the State. Jiwan Singh was the son of Sardār Milkha Singh Thepuria, once the most powerful of the Sikh chiefs. His territory extended round Rāwalpindi, yielding him a revenue of about 3 lacs of rupees. On his father's death in 1804 A.D. Jiwan Singh yielded to the rising power of Ranjit Singh and consented to fight under his banner. Jiwan Singh himself died in 1815 A.D. and Ranjit Singh, desirous of having a more direct control over Rāwalpindi on account of its strategic position, commanding as it did the north-western route into India, annexed the territory to the Kingdom of Lahore and transferred the small force of 280 men into his own service.

Besides the addition of few troopers, Ranjit Singh did not effect any change in the constitution of the regiment and the old officers of Jiwan Singh were allowed to retain their command.

Diwān Rādha Kishan was one of the earliest commanders of the regiment, and Griffin has ascribed to him the distinction of being the first to scale the walls of the Attock fort when it was besieged by the Mahārāja's armies.

Devi Sahāi, son of Rādha Kishan, and Lāla Dās Mal continued to hold command for several years. In the end of Sambat 1886, when Devi Sahāi was promoted to the command of the ghorcharāh khāss regiment, on the death of his uncle, Diwān Kishan Chand, Rādha Kishan's second son, Bishan Dās, was appointed commander of the derah and continued to hold it till the final dissolution of the regiment in 1849 A.D.

As remarked elsewhere in these notes, the distinguished officers of this branch of the army were frequently employed on civil and administrative posts under the Government and Diwan Bishan Dās for two years i.e. Sambat 1887 and 1888, is said to have held the post of the collector of revenues of Rāwalpindi in addition to his military duties.

The regiment in the beginning formed part of the force placed under Sardār 'Atar Singh Sindhānwālia and then under his brother Lehna Singh. But in 1848 A. D. when the Sindhānwālia Sardārs were overpowered in the struggle with Rāja Hira Singh and their jāgīrs confiscated, this regiment was placed under Sardār 'Atar Singh Sindhānwālia.

Strength.—In the beginning the strength of the regiment is recorded at 300 men with an annual salary of Rs. 1,00,275. Later on, a number of Sindhānwālia troopers, who had been granted jāgīrs in the district of Pindigheb, were amalgamated to this regiment together with a derah of the Akdli Nihangs, added en bloc. Again in 1843, as the result of change in the command, the Kālīānwāla contingent was also made to form part of the regiment—raising its strength to 1,060 men whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 2,38,121.

Date of rolls.—Chet 1901—Hār 1902 ; folios 315.

DERAH SINDHĀNWĀLIA.

This regiment should not be taken to include the contingents supplied by the Sindhānwālia Sardārs. It was composed of troops paid directly by the State but placed in common with the feudal levies of the Sindhānwāliās under Sardār Amīr Singh and subsequently under his sons Lehna Singh and Shamsher Singh. The Sindhānwāliās on account of their close relation with Mahārāja Ranjīt Singh possessed immense wealth and influence in the country. Sardār Amīr Singh, the uncle of Ranjīt Singh, accompanied him in his earliest expeditions, and his sons, Budh Singh and 'Atar Singh, specially made their mark in Peshāwar and other frontier campaigns—the former for his skilful generalship and the latter for his courage and bravery. On his father's death in 1827 Lehna Singh, who was specially in the good books of the Mahārāja, assumed the charge of the family estates and retained command of the regiment till he was killed in September 1843 in his struggle with Rāja Hira Singh. Their family estates were confiscated by Hira Singh, but Shamsher Singh, who was at Peshāwar and did not join the struggle, was confirmed in his own share of the property and was given the command of this derah.

Strength.—In Sambat 1902 (1845 A.D.) the strength of the regiment is recorded at 536 men whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 1,48,836.

Date of rolls.—From Chet 1901—Hār 1902 ; folios 137.

DERAH SHĀM SINGH, ATTĀRĪWĀLA.

This regiment formed that portion of the Attārīwāla contingent which was directly paid by the State—the remaining being maintained by Sardār Nihāl Singh himself out of the service jāgīrs granted him by the Mahārāja.

It was formed for the first time in 1808 A. D. when about 150 sowārs from the Attārīwāla contingent were taken over in the direct pay of the Government.

Sardār Nihāl Singh with his contingent rendered conspicuous service in most of the earlier campaigns of Ranjīt Singh. On his death in 1818 his son, Sardār Shām Singh, assumed the command of the regiment under whom it distinguished itself signally at Multān, Kashmir, Peshāwar and Mudki during the first Sikh War where Shām Singh fell sword in hand and pierced with seven bullets.

*Lehna Singh, for his distinguished action at the fort of Shabqadar, had won the good graces of Ranjīt Singh. On learning the news of Lehna Singh's having successfully defended the fort against the fearful Afghan odds, the Mahārāja is said to have remarked—"Lehna Singh has done what could be expected of only an experienced general though he (Ranjīt Singh) had always regarded him a mere child."—Pages 389 Roznamcha Ranjīt Singh, by Sohan Lal, Part III.

Further on page 401 the author says that in recognition of these services the title of ujjal didār, nirmal buddh, Sardār dawakar Sardar Lehna Singh kizbar-i-jang was conferred upon him. Griffin's Chiefs and Families of Note in the Punjab does not mention the last words kizbar-i-jang in the title.

The Attāriwāla Sardārs, both father and son, were very brave and gallant soldiers, and in the words of Sir Lepel Griffin "no Sikh Sardār, excepting the Sindhānwālās, stood so high in the Mahārāja's favour as the Attāriwālās."

Strength.—Starting with 155, the strength of the regiment reached 204 men after some additions to its number by Mahārāja Sher Singh and Sardār Jawāhir Singh and in Sambat 1902 (1845 A. D.) its annual salary is recorded at Rs. 67,211.

NOTE.—The regiment as such was disbanded at the first general muster in Phāgan 1902 (March 1846 A. D.)

Date of rolls.—(Not complete) roughly from Chet 1901 to Hār 1902 ; folios 72.

DERAH GURMUKH SINGH LAMBA.

This regiment first came into existence in 1808 A.D. when, on the death of Nar Singh Chamiāriwāla, his troopers were placed under Sardār Gurmukh Singh. Gurmukh Singh was one of the most famous of the Mahārāja's generals and joined almost all the campaigns of Ranjīt Singh and his successors. In 1788 A. D., when he was eight years old, Sardār Mahān Singh selected him a play-fellow and companion of his son, Ranjīt. He outlived his playmate (and subsequent master) having served him and his descendants most loyally. A detailed account of the military services of the Sardār would embrace the history of all the Sikh Wars. Suffice it to say, that he joined in almost all of them and served with distinction and credit.

Strength.—The regiment started with 60 men and only 20 more were added during the lifetime of the Mahārāja. Rāja Hira Singh, however, afterwards doubled its strength by transferring troopers from several other derahs. In the pay rolls of Sambat 1903 (1846 A. D.) its strength is recorded at 193 men whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 58,800.

NOTE.—The regiment as such was disbanded at the first general muster in Phāgan 1902 (March 1846 A.D.)

Date of rolls.—Chet 1901—Hār 1902 ; folios 74.

DERAH RĀJA LĀL SINGH.

This regiment, also known as derah Mahārāja Sher Singh, comprised 19 misls or companies of troopers, for the first time grouped together to form one regiment at the close of the Mahārāja's reign in Sambat 1900 (1843 A. D.) The regiment was designated as derah Rāja Lāl Singh—perhaps so called because it had among its subordinate units one company of 100 troopers known by that name. Rāja Lāl Singh, son of Misar Jassa Mal—the boṣhākhārā of Ranjīt Singh—entered service in the humble capacity of a clerk in the treasury. He gradually rose to a position of some importance, and in 1843 A. D. on the death of Misar Beli Rām he was promoted to the office of the chief treasurer by Rāja Hira Singh. His influence, however, increased under the next Minister, Sardār Jawāhir Singh, and on the death of the latter succeeded him to the uzārat. He was appointed one of the commanders of the Sikh troops during the first Sikh War. In 1846 he was charged with treason in connection with the rebellion of the Kashmir Governor, Shaikh Imām-u'd-dīn, and banished from the country.

The command of the regiment was given to Sardār Kāhan Singh Kuhāria—a veteran soldier and officer of note who had distinguished himself in several actions on the frontiers of Bannu, Tonk and Peshāwar, commanding a wing of the chahāryāri deraḥ under Rāja Suchet Singh.

Strength.—The strength of the regiment is recorded in Sambat 1901 (1844 A. D.) at 1,050 men whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 3,26,928.

NOTE.—Between Chet 1902—Hār 1902 (April—July 1845 A. D.) it appears that there was a considerable addition to its strength. In the rolls for the month of Sāwan—Bhādon (August 1845 A. D.) the numbers recorded stand at 2,120 men whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 6,21,683. Pay rolls of the intervening period have not been traced.

Date of rolls.—Chet—Phāgan 1901 ; folios 252.

DERAḤ MŪL RĀJIA.

In the pay rolls of the earlier years the regiment appears under the designation of deraḥ sāhibzāda buland iqbal (Prince Kharak Singh) so called because in the beginning it formed the contingent supplied and maintained by the heir-apparent Kharak Singh. The pay rolls of the regiment commence in the year Sambat 1877 (1820 A. D.).

It was then commanded by Diwān Shām Singh who was succeeded by his Lieutenant, Munshi Mūl Rāj, in Sambat 1879 (1822 A. D.). It was probably after the name of its commandant, Mūl Rāj, that the regiment was afterwards probably known as deraḥ Mūl Rājwā. From Sambat 1881 (1824 A. D.) the pay rolls of the regiment are not to be found in the record till we come to the year 1842 A. D. when after the demise of Mahārāja Kharak Singh it was placed under one Sardār Miyān Singh. Again in 1902 (1845 A. D.) Sardār Nar Singh Aimūwāla, a relative of the Minister Jawāhar Singh, was appointed commander of the deraḥ.

Strength.—This regiment did not witness any considerable additions to its strength. Mahārāja Sher Singh and Rāja Hira Singh added about 60 troopers to the original number and raised its strength to 614 whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 1,85,800.

Date of rolls.—Chet 1901—Hār 1902 ; folios 150.

DERAḤ FATEH SINGH JOGI.

The regiment as such came into existence in Sambat 1901 (1844 A. D.) when 4 companies of troopers having been detached from different derahs were formed into one regiment and placed under Fateh Singh Jogi.

Strength.—In the rolls of 1844-45 A. D. the strength of the regiment is recorded at 224 men whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 67,800.

Date of rolls.—Chet 1901—Hār 1902 ; folios 55.

DERAḤ ĀIN-UL-MULK IMĀM-U'D-DĪN.

The deraḥ was more popularly known by the name of "ghoṛcharāh Nau Nihāl Singh." The 200 troopers comprising this deraḥ served as bodyguard of Prince Nau Nihāl Singh and on the latter's death were placed under Sheikh Imām-u'd-Dīn, Governor of Kashmir.

Strength.—220 men, whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 66,000.

Date of rolls.—Chet 1901—Hār 1902 ; folios 55.

DERAH SARDAR MANGAL SINGH.

This regiment was raised towards the end of Sambat 1901 (1844 A. D.) during the time of Sardar Jawahir Singh and placed under the command of Sardar Mangal Singh. The commander Mangal Singh was a scion of the old Rāmgarhia family. He had seen service in various capacities before his appointment to the command of this regiment. He fought in the Peshāwar campaign and distinguished himself in the battle of Jamrud in 1837 A.D. Two years later he was sent to the Kāngra Territory as assistant to Sardar Lehna Singh Majithia and during the absence of that Chief at Peshāwar, he was placed in charge of the hill forts and was active in the suppression of the insurrection of 1840 A.D. The Sardar did not take part in the Sikh Wars as he was chiefly employed on administrative duties in Kāngra.

The regiment was disbanded in March 1846 A.D. along with few others.

Strength.—470 men, whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 1,36,000.

Date of rolls.—Māngh 1901—Hār 1902 ; folios 64.

DERAH SARDAR JAWAHIR SINGH.

This company of 25 orderly troopers were raised in Sambat 1901 (1844 A. D.) by Sardar Jawahir Singh as his bodyguard.

Strength.—25 men whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 8,450.

Date of rolls.—Māngh 1901—Asūj 1902 ; folios 5.

DERAH MIYAN BOKAN KHAN.

Miyān Bokan Khān was the chief of the Mahārāja's khāṣṣ stud.

NOTE.—In Māngh 1902 (February 1846 A.D.) as the result of retrenchment 36 men were discharged from service and the remaining 66 were incorporated into the derah Mahārāja Sher Singh commanded by Sardar Kāhan Singh Kuhāria.

Strength.—102 men, whose annual salary amounted to Rs. 35,800.

Date of rolls.—Chet 1901—Hār 1902 ; folios 19.

(ii) Pay rolls of Artillery.

ZAMBURAKKHANA.

Under the above head have been arranged pay rolls of the following 7 derahs (units) of swivel guns attached to various derahs of irregular cavalry :—

- 1) dehra Nihāl Singh (97 swivels)—150 men, salary Rs. 1,913 per month.
- (2) „ Bahādur Singh (62 swivels)—94 men, salary Rs. 825 per month.
- (3) „ Kāhan Singh (16 swivels)—27 men, salary Rs. 244 per month.
- (4) „ Sandar 'Atar Singh (20 swivels)—40 men, salary Rs. 347 per month.

(5) derah Jai Singh (45 swivels)—79 men, salary Rs. 952 per month.

(6) „ Faiz Bakhsh (53 swivels)—101 men, salary Rs. 1,050 per month.

(7) „ Jalāl-u'd-Dīn (49 swivels)—79 men, salary Rs. 920 per month.

Remarks.—This short period of nine months witnessed changes of the greatest moment in the Sikh history.

The power of the khālsa army, which had been growing unchecked since the demise of the great Mahārāja, now reached its zenith. In January 1845 it had removed Rāja Hira Singh from wasārāt and murdered him, and again in September it tried and condemned to death the Minister Jawāhir Singh. In fact everyone in power now dreaded its strength.

Now since the Court party, headed by Rāni Jindān, saw no other way of freeing itself from the galling yoke of the army it instigated the latter to invade the British territory. The infuriated khālsa accordingly, on 8th December 1845, crossed the Sutlej and a few days later the British Government, believing their object to be hostile, declared war. This lasted for 3 months, and after several engagements at Mudki, Ferozshahr, Aliwāl and Sobrāon, ended in the defeat of the khālsa. On 8th March 1846 was signed the treaty of Lahore by which Mahārāja Dalip Singh ceded to the British Government, in perpetual sovereignty, the whole country, hill and plain, between the rivers Beās and Sutlej. The territories of Jammu and Kashmīr were made over to Mahārāja Gulāb Singh for a sum of seventy-five lacs which he paid as the balance of one crore of rupees imposed upon the Lahore darbār as war indemnity. Further the Mahārāja engaged to reduce his army to 2½ battalions of regular infantry and 12,000 cavalry and surrender all the guns which had been pointed against the British Army.

The Lahore darbār, in accordance with the provisions of the treaty, took in hand the reduction of the army immediately on the restoration of peace and order. Examination of the pay rolls shows that the retrenchment was managed with great tact. At the time of each periodical disbursement a certain number of troopers were taken off from the strength of each derah and having been paid their arrears and other dues were discharged from service. The pay rolls dealt with in this bundle comprise two detailed lists—(i) of the ba-hāl māndah or those retained and (ii) of the bar-tarf shudāh or those discharged from service.

The maximum strength of this arm, it may be noted, reached 19,100 men during the wizārat of Rāja Lāl Singh and its salary amounted to Rs. 58,27,550 per annum. (Total number taken off from the rolls after the disbursement for the months of Māngh and Phāgan (February and March) 1846 A.D. was 8,850, including the dead and wounded in the war.)

The pay rolls noted under each head are arranged in two sets,—(i) from Sāwan to Poh 1902 (August 1845—January 1846 A. D.); (ii) from Māngh to Phāgan 1902 (February—March 1846 A. D.)

Date of rolls.—Sāwan—Phāgan 1902 (August 1845—March 1846 A.D.)

² Sardār Lehna Singh, Majithia, was not on good terms with Pandit Jalla, the tutor of Rāja Hira Singh. He, therefore, left Panjab on a pretext of pilgrimage to Hardwar and Benāres early during the Rāja's ministership. The command of the Rāmgarhia derah together with a division of the regular army (see page 83) was accordingly given to his half-brother, Kanjodh Singh, Majithia.

³ This regiment was formed by grouping together troopers detached from different derahs. It was placed under Sardar 'Atar Singh, brother of the notorious Manglān, kanizak (the mail servant) of Rāni Chand Kaur.

⁵ The past history of the above-named derah is not known. The word appears to denote some sub-caste of the Rājputs.

⁶ As the result of the dissolution of derah Naulakha Khurd several smaller groups came into existence—derah Mussalmānān, derah Rām Singh Chāpāwāla and derah Langar Khān being the most important ones.

Remarks—After the conclusion of the treaty of Lahore, Rāni Jindān was recognized as Regent of the State with Rāja Lāl Singh as Executive Minister. Major Lawrence was stationed at Lahore to represent the interests of the British Government. In December 1846 Rāja Lāl Singh was tried for having secretly instigated Shaikh Inām-ud-Dīn to refuse to deliver the province of Kashmir to Mahārāja Gulāb Singh to whom under the treaty it now belonged. Lāl Singh's guilt being proved, he was deposed from his office and banished from Lahore. The Government was, accordingly, placed in the hands of a Council of Regency consisting of 8 Sikh Chiefs with a British Resident to control and direct its actions.

The affairs ran with apparent smoothness for about a year, and to a casual observer there was peace and quiet in the country. But under this smooth surface were hidden, as subsequent events proved, elements of discontent which needed only an opportunity to stir them up into active rebellion. This opportunity was offered by the revolt of Diwān Māl Rāj, Governor of Multān. The news of the Multān outbreak spread like wild fire and the khālṣa was again up in arms. Proclamations were issued throughout the Kingdom calling upon every true Sikh, in the name of the Guru, to gird up his loins and take part in the holy war which was to free the khālṣa from the oppression of the farhangī. With varying fortunes the war lasted for 6 months when on 12th March 1849 the surrender of the Sikh Commander Rāja Sher Singh brought the struggle to a close.

On March 29th the proclamation of the annexation of the Panjāb was read out and the Governor-General declared that the Kingdom of the Panjāb was at an end and all the territories of Mahārāja Ranjīt Singh were then and henceforth a portion of the British Empire in India.

The pay rolls in the bundle accordingly close with the month of Bhādon 1905 (September 1848), i.e., the time when the second Sikh War commenced. The reduction and remodelling of the army, as provided in the treaty of March 1846, went on, till in Chet 1905 (April 1848 A.D.) the Maltān outbreak suspended further operations. The number as borne on the rolls for month of Phāgan 1904 (March 1848 A.D.) stands at 10,650 men.

NOTE.—The rolls of each ḍerah have been arranged in four sets, each containing the lists of ba-hāl shudāh (retained) and bar-tarf shudāh (discharged). Out of the number discharged 115 men were given life pensions.

It was placed under Sardār (afterwards Rāja) Sher Singh, son of Sardār Chatar Singh, Attārīwāla. The Sardār is too well known as Commander of the Sikh army in the second Sikh War to need any description here.

²This ḍerah was composed of the followers of Muhammadan jāgirdārs and consisted of 10 subordinate *mīst*s. These *mīst*s had formed part of the Chahāryāri corps and, as said above, on the dissolution of its section, called Naulakha khurd, were grouped to form one ḍerah known by the above-mentioned name.

Under the above head have been arranged detailed lists of men who were granted charitable allowance in cash and jāgīrs between Chet 1903—Bhādon 1905, viz., March 1846—September 1848 A.D.

¹Total number of such men was 420, paid at Rs. 61,000 per annum.

²*Dharm-arth* is a charitable grant and the recipient is known a dharm-arthī. Total number of such men was 233, paid at Rs. 20,400 per annum.

PART III.

JAM' KHARCH ACCOUNTS.

During the early part of his reign, Ranjit Singh, like other Sikh Chiefs, had neither a regular State treasury nor an organised system of official records. Business was mostly conducted by verbal orders, and all the accounts of revenue receipts and expenditure were maintained by one Rāma Nand, a banker of Amritsar.

It was only in Sambat 1862 (1805 A. D.) that, at the suggestion of Jaswant Rao Holkar, Ranjit Singh for the first time thought of organising a regular treasury and an office for the preservation of State records. But for want of a competent financier at his court, the Mahārāja could not at the moment carry out his designs. The matter was, therefore, postponed till Diwān Bhawāni Dās joined his court in 1808. Bhawāni Dās had been a revenue officer of conspicuous ability under the Kābul Kings, but being disgusted with their treatment sought service under Ranjit Singh who, being already on the lookout for the services of an experienced financier, offered him a liberal salary. The Diwān immediately on his appointment divided the financial transactions of the State into the following daftars, or departments, namely :--

- (1) daftar abwāb-u'l-māl.
- (2) „ abwāb-u't-tahwīl.
- (3) „ taujīhāt.
- (4) „ marwājīb.
- (5) „ roznamcha akhrājāt.

The daftar abwāb-u'l-māl, sometimes designated only as daftar māliyyāt, dealt with the accounts of revenue receipts. It was further divided into two sub-heads, namely (a) jam' kharch ta'luqāt and (b) jam' kharch sāirāt. The ta'luqāt section comprised entries referring to the revenues derived exclusively from land, while the sāirāt covered every other source of income. The revenue, under the sāir branch, was appropriately dealt with by separate offices and their branches. There were sections for dealing with tributes and presents (nazrāna), escheats (zabtī), excise (ābkārī), customs and transit duties (chawkiyāt) and various other rusūms or fees.

The second department, headed abwāb-u't-tahwīl or more briefly tahwīlāt, was concerned with the debits and credits entered on account of the tahwīldārs or cash-keepers employed at court. The tahwīldār was a general term applied to any man with whom the Government money was deposited or through whom it was expended. This department, accordingly, comprised accounts of multifarious nature such as accounts of cash in central treasury, accounts of toshākhāna bahla or king's privy purse, accounts of military expenditure rendered through several paymasters, accounts of cloth merchants and jewellers, etc.

The third department, headed taujhāt y'ani sūgha kharch, was in charge of the accounts of the Royal household. It comprised the following sub-heads:—(i) Expenditure of the harem, (ii) presents and khil'ats, (iii) entertainments of royal guests, (iv) grant of jāgīrs, etc.

The second and third departments were afterwards consolidated into one.

The fourth or daftar mawājib maintained entries referring to the pay of the army, the civil establishment attached to the court and other menial appointments. This general head was also divided into several sub-heads as (a) mawājib fauj sowāri (Irregular cavalry); (b) mawājib piyāda mut'ayyana qil'ajāt (Infantry garrisoning forts); (c) mawājib sāir jamā'at (miscellaneous companies and guards quartered at Government buildings, ferries, etc.); (d) mawājib 'amla or establishment.

The last or daftar roznāmcha akhrājāt was responsible for keeping accounts of daily expenditure under various heads.

In Sambat 1872 (1815 A. D.) the Department of sāirāt was re-organised and some changes were also effected in the general method of keeping accounts. But as the nature and scope of this note would not permit a more detailed reference to the subject here, these changes will be described at some length in the second volume of the catalogue which will exclusively deal with the records of the central office. This present note is confined to the subject of military accounts containing information under the following heads:—

- (i) Salary of the army, its nature and time of payment.
- (ii) Arrangements for disbursement.
- (iii) Remittance of money.
- (iv) Nature and form of army records—
 - (a) preliminary.
 - (b) permanent.

An examination of the Acquittance Rolls of the army shows that the system of payment in vogue under Ranjit Singh was not always one of cash payment.

The men were remunerated in one or other of the following ways, i.e., by assignment of land revenue, by payment of lump sum at the harvest time, or with a cash salary paid at a fixed monthly rate—the recipient being accordingly known as a jagīrdār, a faṣlānādār,* or a māhādār.†

All the three systems of payment were co-existing for some time, but gradually the second disappeared and the third became more general in the later part of Ranjit Singh's reign.

The faṣlānādār class was paid twice a year in the months of Jeth and Bhādon, but as for the *māhādār*s there was no fixed time for payment of salaries. The modern practice of distributing the salaries at the end of each month was never in vogue under the Sikh Government. The army, as a rule, was in arrears for five or six months. But in spite of this apparent irregularity, there was, as the following table will show, a system which the Government observed in regard to the date of disbursement :—

The combined salary for the months of—

Bisākh—Sāṇwan was paid in Asūj—Kātik (October—November).

Bhādon—Asūj was paid in Poh—Māṅgh.

Kātik—Maghar was paid in Bisākh—Jeth.

Poh—Māṅgh was paid in the month of Hār.

Phāgan—Chet was paid in Sāṇwan—Bhādon.

The department of military accounts was divided into three sections, each of which kept the accounts of the particular class of troops for which it was designed. The three branches of the army—(i) the fauj sowāri, (ii) the fauj qit'ajūt and (iii) the fauj aīn was each assigned a separate agency for the distribution of its salary.

(i) fauj sowāri.—The various units composing this branch were, up to Sambat 1879 (1822 A. D.), paid individually through their commanding officers, but afterwards on the entire cavalry being grouped into three larger divisions, the disbursement was made collectively through the dīvān or treasurer attached to each of these divisions. Another and last step in this direction was taken in Sambat 1900 (1843 A.D.) when all these three sub-treasuries were amalgamated into one which henceforth became the Pay Office for the entire cavalry.

*From Persian faṣl, meaning a harvest. The practice of paying at the harvest time originated probably in the 15th century. The chief received revenue in kind and in turn paid his troops in grain, but it seems to have persisted for some time under Ranjit Singh even when grain was substituted by cash.

†From Persian māh, meaning a month. This practice was formally adopted by Ranjit Singh when he raised his regular troops, because the men whom he employed to train his soldiers were the deserters from the forces of the E. I. Company, and as such were used to a more regular and definite system of pay.

(i) jauj qil'ajāt.—The pay of the garrisons was remitted through their respective thānādārs (or the officers in charge of the forts) who were advanced money by letters of authority on the neighbouring kārdār or Collectors.

(iii) fauj aīn.—Payment to the regular army was, from the very beginning, made through one man called the bukhshi or the Paymaster. He had a separate treasury under his charge known as peī khazāna /auj. He was advanced necessary funds for the purpose and was expected to maintain a regular account of receipts and disbursements which he submitted to the Head Office.

In order to give the head office an idea of probable funds required for disbursement of salaries, the officers in charge of payment used to submit a taqdama or estimate based on the approximate strength of the various units. On the receipt of these estimates they were provided with funds, partly by means of cash remittance from the central treasury and partly by letters of authority drawn on tahwīldārs and kārdārs.

The papers that were compiled by way of office record at the time of distribution of salary may be divided under two heads: (i) Preliminary and (ii) Permanent:—

(i) PRELIMINARY.—Preliminary records consisted of four registers, namely, (a) roznāmcha taqsīm, (b) roznāmcha kasrāt, (c) roznāmcha amānat, and (d) wāsīl bāqi taqsīm.

(a) roznāmcha taqsīm.—Was a Day Book containing each item of payment in the order in which it was made.

(b) roznāmcha kasrāt.—Was a register in which were recorded the various deductions made from the pay of a soldier. These deductions included the prescribed deductions for wardi (military uniform), fines for absence from duty, breach of discipline, etc.

(c) roznāmcha amānat.—Comprised the account of salaries undisbursed or withheld for future payment. It provided for the record of following particulars: the name of the man and the number or designation of the unit he belonged to, the reason of absence at the time of payment, the amount held in deposit, the date of repayment and the amount actually repaid.

(d) The last or wāsīl bāqi taqsīm.—Was a return designed to facilitate the final adjustment of accounts. It contained aggregates of receipts, of disbursements and of balances entered on account of individual units. The wāsīl bāqi papers proved of great assistance in preparing the final account books called the jau' kharch taqsīm wherein these aggregates were posted without much risk of their being incorrect.

(ii) PERMANENT.—The second or permanent record comprised the following five registers compiled mostly from the preliminary papers :—

- (a) barāwurd taqsīm talab.
- (b) jam' kharch pe'i khazāna.
- (c) jam' kharch taqsīm.
- (d) jam' kharch kasrāt
- (e) jam' kharch amānat.

(a) barāwurd taqsīm talab.—In order to show what this was like, a specimen is reproduced in the Appendix.

(b) jam' kharch pe'i khazāna.—This register contained in one place a consolidated account of the receipts and disbursements of cash received in the military treasury. The receipt section was more detailed than that of disbursement. The latter contained only in aggregate the amount debited to a regiment, whereas in the former were detailed in every instance of credit, particulars specifying the date, the source of receipt, and the object for which money was required.

(c) jam' kharch taqsīm.—This register was usually prepared at the end of six months and was designed to bring at one place all the items of receipts and disbursements relating to the regular army. The receipts section of this register, accordingly, provided for the detailed entries of the cash receipt as well as for those debited to the department by means of orders on local treasuries and letters of authority sanctioning departmental transfers.

The disbursement section contained only the totals of the amount paid as salary and other charges to each unit of the army.

The closing section gives the details of the balance showing firstly cash left in the treasury chest, secondly with the regimental munshīs, and thirdly the amount unrealized from various tankhwāh parwānās drawn on local treasuries or other Government departments.

(d) and (e) jam' kharch amānat and jam' kharch kasrāt—These registers were meant for finally consolidating in one place the accounts under those heads. The accounts were extracted from the preliminary registers of the same name, providing, however, for additional entries of re-payments of deposits, remissions of fines or other miscellaneous disbursements made out of these funds, and showing lastly the balance in hand on each account.

The undisbursed salaries of fauti (dead) and ba-kār āmdah, or those killed in action, were made over if claimed to the deceased's barādar-i-haqīqī (real brother), pisarash (his son), ahīya (his wife), mādrash, pidrash (his parents), less the charges for cremation or burial (kafn dāfn).

SUMMARY CATALOGUE.

Part III of the volume deals with ten bundles relating to the subject of accounts. Of these ten, eight pertain to jam' kharch account of the regular and two of the irregular army. The latter cover a period of the last 5 years of the Sikh rule, whereas the former extend over 29 years from 1818 to 1847 A. D.

This record of 29 years, it may be remarked, is not complete in itself. It is only the jam' kharch taqsim or books of consolidated account of receipts and disbursements that are preserved for almost the entire length of the period above mentioned and the preliminary papers of kasrat and amanat accounts could be traced only for broken periods.

The main order in which the bundles have been numbered and arranged is chronological, but the sub-grouping of papers in a bundle has been done in reference to the subjects they relate to. The advantage of this system will be that one would keep intact the original arrangements followed by the Sikhs, while the other will facilitate any reference or cross-reference of the items of account in a particular year from one sub-head to another.

(i) Regular army.

Bundle No. Ca 1.—Total folios 3,566; size 7' × 5½"; written in shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Name not given.

Date.—Sambat 1875—1885 (May 1818—1828 A. D.).

Contents.—The bundle comprises the jam' kharch account of the regular army for eleven years from May 1818 to 1828 containing returns or registers described in the introductory note, Part III. The papers in the bundle have been arranged in the following groups:—

- (1) From Bisākh 1875 to Māṅgh 1878 (May 1818—Jany. 1822 A.D.).
- (2) From Phāgan 1878 to Chet 1881 (Feby. 1822—April 1824 A.D.).
- (3) From Bisākh 1881 to Chet 1882 (May 1824—April 1825 A. D.).
- (4) Sambat 1882 (May 1825—April 1826 A. D.).
- (5) Phāgan 1882 to Māṅgh 1883 (March 1826—Feby. 1827 A.D.).
- (6) Sambat 1884 to 1885 (18.7 A. D.).

Remarks.—Papers covering identical dates and relating to allied heads of accounts have been arranged and bound together, so that the group thus formed should read like a regular account book.

(1) Bisākh 1875—Māṅgh 1878.

Under the above head have been arranged papers relating to the following sub-heads of accounts:—

- (i) jam' kharch peti khazāna tahwīl Sujān Rāi from Bisākh 1877 to Chet 1878 (May 1820—April 1821 A.D.); folios 72.

- (ii) jam' kharch taqsīm from Bisākh 1875 to Māngh 1878 (May 1818—February 1822 A. D.); folios 75.
- (iii) jam' kharch kasrāt from Bisākh 1877 to Sānwan 1878 (May 1820—August 1821 A. D.); folios 311.
- (iv) jam' kharch amānat from Phāgan 1876 to Sānwan 1878 (March 1820—August 1821 A. D.); folios 498.
- (v) *jam' kharch magzīn from Bhādon 1875 to Sānwan 1878 (September 1818—August 1821 A. D.); folios 79.
- (vi) jam' kharch modīkhāna† from Māngh 1875 to Bhādon 1876 (February—July 1819 A. D.); folios 19.
- (vii) wāṣil bāqi taqsīm from 1877 to 1878 (1820-1821 A. D.) (March 1822—December 1823 A. D.); folios 195.

(2) Phāgan 1878—Chet 1881.

- (i) jam' kharch taqsīm from Phāgan 1878 to Chet 1881.
- (ii) jam' kharch peti khazāna from Phāgan 1878 to Maghar 1880; folios 16.
- (iii) jam' kharch kasrāt from Kātik 1879 to Chet 1881; folios 219.
- (iv) jam' kharch amānat from Phāgan 1879 to Chet 1881 (February 1823—April 1824 A. D.); folios 362.

(3) Bisākh 1881—Chet 1882.

- (i) jam' kharch taqsīm from Poh 1880 to Chet 1882; folios 35.
- (ii) jam' kharch peti khazāna from Poh 1880 to Māngh 1881 (January 1824—February 1825 A. D.); folios 15.
- (iii) jam' kharch kasrāt from Bisākh to Māngh 1881 (May 1824—February 1825 A. D.); folios 115.
- (iv) jam' kharch amānat from Bisākh 1881 to Māngh 1881; folios 200.

NOTE.—Papers are not complete for full two years—major portion is missing. Jam' kharch kasrāt from Bisākh 1881 to Chet 1882 (May 1824—April 1825 A. D.) is abstracted from the above returns; folio 33.

* Magzīn, corrupted form of magazine.

† Modī in Sanskrit means a steward; modīkhāna is therefore a store-house. The modīkhāna papers cover the account of store-house attached to the army mess.

(4) Sambat 1882.

- (i) jam' kharch taqsīm from Phāgan 1881 to Māṅgh 1882 (March 1824—February 1826 A.D.)
- (ii) jam' kharch peti khazāna from Phāgan 1881 to Māṅgh 1882; folios 26
- (iii) jam' kharch kasrāt from Bisākh 1882 to Chet 1883 (May 1825—April 1826 A.D.); folios 215
- (iv) jam' kharch amānat from Phāgan 1881 to Māṅgh 1882; folios 225.
- (v) jam' kharch modīkhāna from Aṣūj 1882 to Phāgan 1882 (October 1825—March 1826 A.D.); folios 23.

(5) Phāgan 1882—Māṅgh 1883.

- (i) jam' kharch taqsīm (see (i) group 6 below).
- (ii) taqdama from Phāgan 1882 to Sāṇwan 1883 (March 18. 6—August 1826 A.D.); folios 12.
- (iii) jam' kharch amānat from Phāgan 1882 to Māṅgh 1883 (March 1826—February 1827 A. D.); folios 196.
- (iv) jam' kharch kasrāt from Bisākh 1883 to Māṅgh 1883 (May 1826—February 1827 A. D.); folios 11.
- (v) modīkhāna from Poh 1882 to Hār 1883 (January—July 1826 A. D.); folios 11.

(6) Sambat 1884-1885.

- (i) jam' kharch taqsīm together with a khūāsa or abstract of the same papers from Bisākh 1883 to Chet 1885 (May 1826—April 1828 A. D.); folios 8.
- (ii) roznāmcha taqsīm from Bisākh to Maghar 1885 (May—December 1828 A. D.); folios 62.
- (iii) siyāh kasrāt from Bisākh to Aṣūj 1885 (May—October 1828 A. D.); folios 125.
- (iv) siyāh amānat from Bisākh to Maghar 1885; folios 218.
- (v) jam' kharch modīkhāna from Bisākh 1884 to Sāṇwan 1886 (May 1827—August 1829 A. D.); folios 58.

Bundle No. Ca 2—Total folios 3,568; size $7\frac{1}{2}'' \times 5\frac{1}{4}''$; written in shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Bakhshi Bhagat Rām

Date.—Sambat 1886—1899 (1829—1842 A.D.)

Contents.—The bundle contains papers relating to the jam' kharch accounts of the regular army from Sambat 1886 to 1899, i.e., for the next

13 years following those for which the papers were arranged in Bundle Ca 1. The contents of the bundle have been arranged as follows:—

- (1) Sambat 1886 (May 1829—February 1830 A. D.)
- (2) Sambat 1887 (March 1830—April 1831 A. D.).
- (3) Sambat 1888 (May 1831—February 1832 A. D.).
- (4) Sambat 1890 (May—August 1833 A.D.).
- (5) Sambat 1893, 636 A. D.).
- (6) Sambat 1895 (1838 A. D.).
- (7) Sambat 1898-99 (1841—1842 A. D.).

Remarks.—The major portion of the papers is missing so much so that a complete set of returns for even one out of thirteen years covered by these papers could not be traced.

The nature of the papers is more or less preliminary and may be of some assistance to examine the accounts dealt with in bundles Ca 3 and Ca 6.

(1) Sambat 1886.

- (i) roznāmcha taqsim from Bisākh to Maghar 1886 (May—December 1829 A.D.) ; folios 56.
- (ii) siyāh kasrāt from Bisākh to Māngh 1886 (May 1829—February 1830 A.D.) ; folios 225.
- (iii) siyāh amānat from Bisākh to Māngh 1886 (May 1829—February 1830 A.D.) ; folios 290.
- (iv) jam' kharch modikhāna from Phāgan 1885 to Bisākh 1887 (March 1829—May 1830 A.D.) ; folios. 89.

(2) Sambat 1887.

- (i) roznāmcha taqsim from Bisākh 1887 to Chet 1888 (May 1830—April 1831 A.D.) ; folios 129.
- (ii) jam kharch kasrāt from Bisākh 1887 to Chet 1888 ; folios 26.
- (iii) siyāh kasrāt from Bisākh 1887 to Chet 1888 ; folios 298.
- (iv) siyāh amānat from Bisākh 1887 to Maghar 1887 (May—December 1830 A.D.) ; folios 278.
- (v) jam' kharch modikhāna from Bhādon 1887 to Sānwan 1888 (September 1830—August 1831 A.D.) ; folios 108.
- (vi) *jam' kharch tambol. These papers contain details of the amount deducted from the pay of the army on the occasion of the Mahārāja's marriage with two daughters of Rāja Sansār Chand Katoch of Kāngra by his ga'dan wife, in Asūj 1886 (September 1829 A.D.) ; folios 91.

tambol* is a marriage present. The practice of receiving such presents in cash on the occasion of weddings of their sons and daughters is very common among Indian parents.

(3) Sambat 1888.

- (i) jam' kharch naqdī petz khazāna from Bisākh to Asūj 1888 (May—October 1831 A.D.) ; folios 7.
- (ii) jam kharch taqsīm from Bhādon to Asūj 1888 (September—October 1831 A.D.) ; folios 7.
- (iii) taqdama from Poh to Māngh 1888 (January -- February 1832 A.D.) ; folios 7.
- (iv) jam' kharch wardi for 1888 (1831 A.D.) ; folios 6.
- (v) roznāmcha taqsīm from Bisākh 1888 to Chet 1889 (May 1831—April 1832 A.D.) ; folios 94.
- (vi) jam' kharch kasrāt from Bisākh to Sānwan 1888 (May—August 1831 A.D.).
- (vii) siyāh kasrāt for 1888 (1831 A.D. papers are not complete) ; folios 320.

(4) Sambat 1890.

- (i) roznāmcha taqsīm from Bisākh to Sānwan 1890 (May 1833—August 1833 A.D.) ;
- (ii) siyāh kasrāt ;
- (iii) siyāh amānat ; folios 298.

NOTE.—The major portion of papers in each of the above sets is missing.

(5) Sambat 1893.

- (i) siyāh kasrāt ; folios 91.
- (ii) siyāh amānat ; folios 82.
- (iii) taqdama and other miscellaneous papers from Bisākh to Sānwan 1894 (May—August 1837 A.D.) ; folios 14.

NOTE.—The above returns relate only to the troops quartered at P'eshāwar.

(6) Sambat 1895.

- (i) roznāmcha taqsīm ;
- (ii) siyāh amānat ;
- (iii) siyāh kasrāt ; folios 440.

NOTE.—The major portion of papers in each of the above sets is missing.

(7) Sambat 1898.

- (i) roznāmcha taqsīm and taqdāma papers ;
- (ii) siyāh kasrāt ;
- (iii) siyāh amānat ;

- (iv) waz'at wardi, containing accounts of deductions for uniform. The entries represent only the aggregate receipts from each unit of the army; folios 612.

NOTE.—These papers belong to the Peshāwar Branch of the Army Office. Papers are not complete.

Bundle No. Ca 3.—Total folios 3,586 ; size 7"×5"; written in mixed shikasta.

Official in-charge.—Sayyid Imām Shāh.

Date.—Phāgan 1896—Jeth 1900 (March 1840—June 1843 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains papers relating to amānat and kasrāt accounts of the regular army. Papers in the bundle have been arranged in the following groups:—

- (1) siyāh amānat
- (2) siyāh kasrāt.
- (3) roznāmcha taqsim.
- (4) taqsim 'amla.

Remarks.—These papers belong to the office of Sayyid Imām Shāh, who was in charge of the amānat and kasrāt departments.

(1) SIYĀH AMĀNAT.

Under the above head have been arranged the following groups of papers relating to amānat accounts:—

- (i) Phāgan 1896—Asūj 1897 (March—October 1840 A.D.).
- (ii) Phāgan 1897—Māngh 1898 (March 1841—February 1842 A.D.)
- (iii) Phāgan 1898—Māngh 1899 (March 1842—February 1843 A.D.)
- (iv) Phāgan 1899—Jeth 1900 (March—June 1843 A.D.); folios 1,390.

(2) SIYĀH KASRĀT.

- (i) Phāgan 1897—Māngh 1898.
- (ii) Phāgan 1898—Māngh 1899.
- (iii) Phāgan 1899—Jeth 1900; folios 1,360.

(3) ROZNĀMCHA TAQSIM.

Under the above head have been arranged papers relating to roznāmcha or day-book accounts from Phāgan 1898 to Jeth 1900; folios 593.

(4) TAQSIM 'AMLA SARKĀRWĀLA.

Under the above head have been arranged papers containing details of pay of the establishment attached to the Royal household; folios 243.

Bundle No. Ca 4.—Total folios 2,114; size $7\frac{1}{2}" \times 5"$; written in shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—(Name not given.)

Date.—Phāgan 1901—Sānwan 1905 (March 1845—August 1848 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle relates to the amānat, kasrāt and roznāmcha accounts of the regular army. The contents have been arranged in the following three groups :—

- (1) jam' kharch amānat.
- (2) jam' kharch kasrāt.
- (3) roznāmcha taqsim.

Remarks.—Each of the above groups is sub-divided into two parts—one relating to the accounts of the division quartered at Peshāwar and the other to those of the entire regular army.

(1) JAM 'KHARCH AMĀNAT.

(i) Fauj mut'ayyana Peshāwar.

Under the above head have been arranged papers pertaining to accounts of the jam' kharch amānat of the troops stationed at Peshāwar between Phāgan 1901—Asūj 1903 (March 1845—October 1846 A.D.); folios 240.

(ii) Fauj āzn.

Under the above head have been arranged papers pertaining to the accounts of jam' kharch amānat of the entire regular army between Poh 1903—Sānwan 1905 (January 1847—August 1848 A.D.); folios 670.

(2) JAM' KHARCH KASRĀT.

(i) Fauj mut'ayyana Peshāwar.

Contains kasrāt accounts of the troops stationed at Peshāwar between Phāgan 1901—Asūj 1903; folios 150.

(ii) Fauj āzn.

Contains kasrāt accounts of the entire regular army between Poh 1903—Asūj 1905 (January 1847—October 1848 A.D.); folios 438.

(3) ROZNĀMCHA TAQSIM.

(i) Fauj mut'ayyana Peshāwar.

Contains roznāmcha papers relating to the troops stationed in Peshāwar between Hār 1902—Asūj 1903 (July 1845—October 1847 A.D.); folios 71.

(ii) Fauj āzn.

The roznāmcha accounts of the entire regular army between Poh 1903—Asūj 1904 (January—October 1847 A.D.); folios 539.

Bundle No. Ca 5.—Total folios 536 ; size $7\frac{1}{2}'' \times 5\frac{1}{4}''$; written in almost a nist'ālīq hand.

Official-in-charge.—(Name not given.)

Date.—1897—Sānwan 1904 (1840—August 1847 A.D.).

Contents.—This bundle contains taqdama papers or salary estimates of regular army for several years between Bhādoṇ 1897—Sānwan 1904 (November 1840—August 1848 A.D.). Papers in the bundle have been arranged in the following three groups:—

(1) Asūj 1897 (October 1840 A.D.)

(2) 1897—Māṅgh 1902 (November 1840—February 1846 A.D.)

(3) Phāgan 1902—Sānwan 1904 (March 1846—August 1847 A.D.)

Remarks.—Each of the above groups will be found very nearly to correspond to the three successive periods into which Sikh history after the death of Mahārāja Ranjīt Singh may be divided, viz.—

(i) Mahārāja Kharak Singh, Nau Nihāl Singh and Bibi Chand Kaur.

(ii) Mahārāja Sher Singh, Mahārāja Dalip Singh and the period of the vazārat of Rāja Hira Singh, Jawāhir Singh and Lāl Singh.

(iii) Mahārāja Dalip Singh and the Council of Regency.

The point worth notice in these papers is the abnormal rise in the strength and salary of the army in the 2nd period.

The first period ending with Asūj 1897 records the number at 38,416 men, whose monthly salary amounted to Rs. 3,72,610.

In the second group the numbers as borne on the rolls for the months of Kātik—Maghar 1902 (November—December 1845) stand at 70,720 men, whose monthly salary amounted to Rs. 8,62,700.

The third group closing with Sānwan 1904 (August 1848) records the number at 29,556 men, whose monthly salary amounted to Rs. 3,40,700.

(1) TAQDAMA, BHĀDOṆ—ASŪJ 1897.

Under the above head have been arranged papers covering taqdama accounts of the regular army for the months of Bhādoṇ—Asūj 1897 ; folios 10.

(2) TAQDAMA, KĀTIK 1897—MĀṅGH 1902.

Under the above head have been arranged the following papers:—

(i) khulāsa kami-o-beshi mauājib fauj āṛn from Kātik 1897 to Māṅgh 1899 ; folios 46.

(ii) taqdama taqṣīm talab from Phāgan 1899 to Māṅgh 1902 (March 1843—February 1846 A.D.).

(3) TAQDAMA, PHĀGAN 1902—SĀNWAN 1904.

Under the above head have been arranged the taqdama papers relating to the regular army from Phāgan 1902 to Sānwan 1904.

These papers have been grouped in nine sets, each set covering a period of two months ; folios 270.

Bundle No. Ca 6.—Total folios 868 ; size $6\frac{3}{4}'' \times 5''$; written in mixed shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Bakhshi Bhagat Rām.

Date.—Bisākh 1888 -- Asūj 1896 (May 1831 -- October 1839 A. D.)

Contents.—This bundle contains detailed annual statements of expenditure of regular army as compiled by Bakhshi Bhagat Rām. The contents of the bundle have been arranged as follows :—

- (1) khulāṣa kul jam' kharch fauj āin.
- (2) jam' kharch taqīm.
- (3) amānat kasrāt.
- (4) jam' kharch kamānāt.

Remarks.—Bhagat Rām was the Paymaster-General of the Army and held this office for nearly 16 years from Sambat 1888 to 1904. For seven years following the death of Mahārāja Ranjit Singh he had not submitted his accounts to any regular audit and was, besides, suspected of misappropriation of the Government money. The darbār accordingly ordered him to submit his accounts to a board composed of Rāi Kishan Chand, Diwān Dina Nāth, Bakhshi Amrik Rāi and two other experienced jaftaris.

This and the following bundle No. Ca 7 relate to these accounts and on examination will be found to be of great assistance in making correct estimates of the strength of the khālṣa army and its expenditure during the last 16 years of the Sikh Rule.

(1) KHULĀṢA KUL JAM' KHARCH FAUJ ĀIN.

The papers arranged under the above head contain an abstract statement of the receipts and disbursements on account of the regular army from April 1831 to July 1847 A.D. ; folios 4.

(2) JAM' KHARCH TAQĪM.

The papers arranged under the above head have been grouped into the following 9 sets :—

- (i) From Bisākh 1888 to Chet 1889 (May 1831—April 1832) ; folios 42.
- (ii) From Bisākh 1889 to Chet 1890 ; folios 32.
- (iii) From Bisākh 1890 to Chet 1891 ; folios 61.
- (iv) From Bisākh 1891 to Chet 1892 ; folios 115.
- (v) From Bisākh 1892 to Chet 1893 ; folios 69.
- (vi) From Bisākh 1893 to Chet 1894 ; folios 80.
- (vii) From Bisākh 1894 to Chet 1895 ; folios 114.
- (viii) From Bisākh 1895 to Chet 1896 ; folios 101.
- (ix) From Bisākh 1896 to Sāṇwan 1896 ; folios 57.

(3) AMĀNAT KASRĀT.

Under the above head have been arranged papers relating to amānat and kasrāt accounts of the regular army ; folios 120.

(4) JAM' KHARCH KAMĀNĀT.

The papers arranged under the above head contain separate sets of jam' kharch accounts relating to the divisions of army on command ; folios 73.

Bundle No. Ca 7.—Total folios 2,693 ; size 7" × 5" ; written in shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Raja Dina Nath.

Date.—Bisakh 1888 – Sānwān 1904 (April 1831—July 1847 A.D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains detailed statements of annual expenditure of the regular army. The contents have been arranged as follows :—

- (1) kaijīyat bāqīyāt hisāb.
- (2) khulāsa jam' kharch taqsim.
- (3) jam' kharch taqsim.
- (4) jam' kharch wardi.
- (5) Miscellaneous.

Remarks.—This bundle may be regarded as a supplement to the preceding one. It contains statements of accounts which were compiled by the Government daftars appointed to check Bhagat Rām's accounts. They are a little more detailed than those prepared by the Bakhshi himself and here and there point out the tafāwut or items not accounted for in the former returns.

(1) KATFİYÁT BAKIYÁT HISÁB.

This set of papers explains the manner in which Bhagat Rām accounted for the sum of Rs. 1,53,372 shown as balance standing in his name. It also contains reference to a bone given by him, binding himself to pay a fine of Re. 1-4-0 for every rupee that may be found incorrect in the return submitted by him. It appears from the contents that his statements were finally accepted as correct, and persons assembled in the darbār affixed their seals and signatures on the paper ; folios 13.

(2) KHULÁSA JAM' KHARCH TAQSIM TALAB.

These are abstract statements of receipts and disbursements which were independently compiled and submitted by Bhagat Rām and Amrik Rai, respectively ; folios 78.

(3) JAM' KHARCH TAQSIM.

The papers arranged under the above head are the detailed statements of receipts and expenditure on account of the regular army as compiled by Amrik Rai, covering a period of 16 years and 4 months from April 1831 to July 1847 A.D. ; folios 2,284.

(4) JAM' KHARCH WARDI.

The wardi accounts detail the sums expended on preparation of army uniform between Sambats 1998 and 1902 ; folios 193.

(5) MISCELLANEOUS.

This batch of papers details certain disputed sums which, according to Amrik Rai, Bhagat Rām could not satisfactorily account for ; folios 125.

Bundle No. Ca 8.—Total folios 1,016 ; size 7" × 5" ; written in a mixed shikasta.

Official in-charge.—(Name not given.)

Date.—Kātik 1902—Sānwān 1903 (November 1845—July 1846 A.D.).

Contents.—This bundle contains details of payments made to (i) the sons or other relations of the men who fell in action (ba-kār āmdah) during the Sutlej campaign and (ii) those who were discharged from the various units of the regular army on the restoration of peace (referred to on page 94). The papers in the bundle have been arranged in the following groups:—

- (1) taqsim dharm arth hā ki dar hangāma Ferozepur ba-kār āmdah.
- (2) bar-tarf hā.

Remarks.—The casualties on the side of the Sikhs as recorded in these lists come up to 2,861 men from regular army alone, including non-combatants.

(1) TAKSĪM DHARM ARTH KI DAR HANGĀMA FERROZPUR BAKĀR ĀMDAH.

The group of papers arranged under the above head contains detailed lists of the names and the amount of pensions granted to widows and orphans of soldiers (belonging to the regular army) killed in the Sutlej campaign ; folios 601.

(2) BAR-TARF HĀ.

The group of papers arranged headed bar-tarf comprises detailed lists of the names of those who were discharged from the regular army at different dates between March 1846 and July 1847. Against each name will be found entries signifying the amount paid to the man as his salary and other arrears ; folios 395.

(ii) Irregular Cavalry.

Bundle No. Cb 1.—Total folios 1,150 ; size 7" × 5" ; written in shikasta.

Officials-in-charge.—Bakhshi Jwāla Nāth and Dīwān Amar Nāth.

Date.—Chet 1901—Phāgan 1902 (March 1844—February 1846 A.D.).

Contents.—Papers in this bundle have been arranged and grouped under the following four heads, namely:—

- (1) 'jam' kharch taqsim.
- (2) khulāṣa tawārīkh fawī sowāri.
- (3) taqsim in'ām derāh Naubakha.
- (4) roznāmcha taqsim.

(1) JAM' KHARACH TAQSĪM.

The papers arranged under the above head contain debits and credits entered on account of monthly salary, in'āms and other miscellaneous payments made to the various derahs of the irregular cavalry, except the Naulakha corps,¹ within two years ending with February 1846. They are arranged in two sets; folios 152.

(2) KHULĀSA TAWĀRĪKH FAUJ SOWĀRI.

These papers outline, in brief, a statistical history of each derah (regiment) of irregular cavalry. Under the head qadīm we find the strength and annual salary of each derah as it stood in the time of Mahārāja Ranjit Singh; whereas the subsequent entries under the head jadīd pertain to several additions made to its number under the successive Governments of Mahārāja Kharak Singh, Nau Nihāl Singh, Bibi Chand Kaur, Mahārāja Sher Singh, Rāja Hira Singh and Sardār Jawāhir Singh; folios 239.

(3) TAQŚĪM IN'ĀM DERAH NAULAKHA.

Under the above head have been arranged the detailed lists of the distribution of in'ām among the troopers of the Naulakha corps.

(4) ROZNĀMCHA TAQŚĪM.

The roznāmcha taqśim are the papers relating to the day book account. They extend over a period of eight months only; from Chet 1901 to Kātik 1902; folios 670.

Bundle No. Cb 2.—Total folios 1,152; size 7"×5"; written in a mixed shikasta.

Official in-charge.—Bakhshi Amrik Rāi.

Date.—Poh 1903—12th Bisākh 1906 (19th December 1846—10th May 1889 A. D.).

Contents.—The bundle contains roznāmcha papers pertaining to the irregular cavalry.

Remarks.—The papers arranged in the bundle relate to the distribution of salaries to the irregular cavalry, showing clearly the names of men discharged as well as of those retained. It is a book of daily accounts, extending over a period of 28 months.

ROZNĀMCHA PETI MUBĀRAK TAQŚĪM TALB FAUJ SAWĀRI.

The papers arranged under the above head pertain to roznāmcha or day book accounts. They have been grouped in 26 sets—each set covering a period of little more than one month; folios 1,152.

¹ In a marginal note on folio 1a of series (1) it is stated that the barāwurd of Naulakha corps was prepared separately, though no traces of this have been found.

PART IV.

DESCRIPTIVE ROLLS.

‘Alā’ud-dīn Khiljī was, perhaps, the first Indian ruler who, early in the 14th century, introduced the practice of drawing up descriptive-rolls of men and horses, but it was apparently discontinued on his death. It was re-established by Sher Shāh and again by Akbar in the eighteenth year of his reign and remained in force till the disintegration of the Mughal Empire in the middle of the 18th century. In the Panjāb the system was revived by Ranjīt Singh about Sambat 1862 (1805 A.D.) and was rigorously enforced throughout the Sikh period. The Mahārāja made it a rule that a man’s chihra or descriptive-roll was drawn up as soon as he entered service.

The descriptive-rolls of the Sikh period are more elaborate than those of the Mughal Emperors. The latter, a specimen of which is reproduced in Irvine’s Army of the Indian Mughals, contains the name of the man, his father’s name, his father’s father’s name, his place of origin, his caste, followed by various details of personal appearance and marks of identification. In the case of a sowār or trooper, a brief description of his horse is also noted.

The rolls of the Sikhs, in addition to the above particulars, show the date of appointment and the starting pay of a trooper followed by any variations therein. The date of transfer to any other regiment or of removal, whether by death, desertion or dismissal, is also invariably noted. A facsimile of this roll by way of specimen will be found on the next page —

[illegible]

The practice of branding the horses and camels of the army was introduced late in the Mahārāja's reign in Sambat 1893 (1836 A. D.). As soon as a trooper was enlisted, his horse received a brand or dāgh, for which the Government charged a fee of Rs. 5. The records, however, make no mention of the form of this brand.

Inspections of cavalry horses were very frequently made. On the day of muster, the Adjutant, assisted by a dārōgha and a salotrī aspān (veterinary doctor), had to inspect the horses of his regiment to see whether they were fit for service and to compare the marks of identification of the animals with those noted in the roll. An abstract of each inspection report was entered in the rolls giving date, month and year. When a horse was rejected as being unfit for service, the entry نہ سوار (unfit) was usually made on the roll, and it was but rarely that the exact reason for rejection was stated. If the animal was passed the entry جسٹو "as before" was made. If it was not looking well, the entry was چاق نہ سازد (not looking stout). When it recovered, the entry was چاق شد (became well).

The pay and allowance of a trooper was to a certain extent regulated by the condition of his animal. It was, therefore, to the interest of the man that his horse should be in good condition. A lean and thin animal was rejected as unfit for service whereupon its sowār lost Rs. 10 per month till it was again passed as fit or until he produced a new one. In case the horse died the trooper drew the pay of a foot-soldier till he provided himself with another. It need hardly be remarked that the threat of cutting down the pay of the sowārs no less than the practice of the periodical inspection of both men and their horses was largely responsible for the state of efficiency which Ranjīt Singh's cavalry had attained.

Nature of information available from these papers.

A few general deductions may fairly be made from a cursory study of these papers:

Firstly.—The opinion generally held that the Mahārāja first thought of introducing European methods of drill after the well-known incident of the affray between the akālīs and the escort of Mr. Metcalfe does not appear to be correct. Ranjīt Singh had raised at least three battalions initiated in the methods of European drill in Sambat 1864 (1807 A.D.) about two years before this incident took place.

Secondly.—That four out of twelve Infantry Battalions raised before the arrival of the French Generals, Ventura and Allard, were purely non-Panjābi battalions, recruited and officered by men coming from several districts of the present United Provinces of Agra and Oudh. Gradually as service in the regular army became more popular in the Province, the purely Panjābi element becomes more marked.

Thirdly.—Service in the army was not restricted to any particular class or creed. Khattris, Rājputs, Jats, Sikhs, Brahmins, Sayyads, Afghāns and Pathāns are all found in the army lists.

Fourthly.—Though there were no well-defined rules governing promotion, men seem to have risen steadily, and merit or conspicuous service seldom went unrewarded. A man who enlisted as a private generally rose to the position of a sūbadār, and many of those who joined the army as sūbadārs or Adjutants, gradually rose to be Generals commanding a full brigade.

Fifthly.—Indiscipline, neglect of duty and insubordination to higher officers were variously punished with fine, loss of pay and rank, imprisonment in quarters and dismissal.

Sixthly.—There does not seem to have been any definite age limit either for entering service or for compulsory retirement. So long as a man was physically fit for active duty, he continued to serve in the army. It appears that men between the age of 20 and 38 were generally regarded as being fit for military duty, and that they continued to serve up to the age of 65 or sometimes even more.

Seventhly.—Although there was no such thing as a regular pension, yet it appears that a kind of allowance for the dead and wounded was sometimes granted. This pension or allowance as worked out from several cases noticed in these papers amounted to about one-third of the pay, and the wounded soldier was required to give a substitute (generally a brother or son) before he was entitled to draw his pension. These allowances were called inglis which seems to indicate that the Mahārāja borrowed the practice from the English.

Eighthly.—Vacancies in the ranks seem to have been filled from the members of the family of the retiring soldier. One may roughly say that about 30 per cent. of the vacancies in the regular army were so filled, whereas in the irregular cavalry this practice was almost invariable; and the explanation seems to be that in the former class of cases the payment was mostly by way of monthly salary and in the latter by iāgār also. There is, therefore, a strong indication that military service was prized and sought after and the fact of a relative having served in the army gave a person a sort of preferential right of appointment.

Summary Catalogue.

We have the evidence of the pay rolls that at the time of the 1st Sikh War there were, at least, 61 battalions of Infantry, 10 regiments of Cavalry, 31 derahs of Artillery and 18 derahs (regiments) of Irregular Cavalry. The descriptive rolls are therefore far from complete, since only 13 bundles are available: of these 5 deal with 13 Infantry Regiments, while 4 with 6 Regular Cavalry; 1 bundle contains the muster rolls of 5 Artillery derahs and the remaining 3 those of various derahs of Irregular Cavalry. Here again a good many papers are missing; and it is only in the case of two derahs (derah khāss and a few mists or subordinate groups belonging to derah Naulakha) that any descriptive-rolls are forthcoming, the remaining being merely muster rolls.

(i) Regular Army.

INFANTRY.

Bundle No. Da 1.—Total folios 1,305: size $8\frac{1}{4}'' \times 5\frac{1}{2}''$; written in a mixed shikasta.

Official-in-charge.—Dīwān Ajodhya Parshād.

Contents.—The bundle contains descriptive-rolls of two infantry battalions.

Remarks.—These battalions were raised between the Sambat years 1865—1868 (1808—1811 A.D.) and were among the earliest attempts of Ranjit Singh to create something by way of regular army. The infantry service not then being popular among his own countrymen, the Mahārāja recruited it from the remains of Sindhia and Holkar's armies and also from the deserters or men discharged from the E. I. Company's troops. The names, sub-castes, and residence entered in the rolls of these battalions show that they were mostly composed of Muhammadans: Afghāns, Sayyads, jājpūts and Shaikhhs who had come from various districts of the modern provinces of Agra and Oudh.

Official-in-charge.—Dīwān Ajodhya Parshād.

Contents.—The bundle contains descriptive-rolls of three infantry battalions.

Remarks.—These battalions were raised between Sambat 1865—1875 (1808—1818 A. D.). Dhaunkal Singh's was perhaps the earliest of regular infantry and was entirely composed of the Pūrbiyās, whereas second and third having been raised at a comparatively later date and at a time when the infantry service was no longer despised in the Panjāb, contain the Panjābi element. Side by side with Pūrbiyās the names of the Sikhs and Rājputs appear in these rolls.

¹This battalion was also known as paltan Talanga.

Contents.—This bundle contains descriptive-rolls of three infantry battalions. The papers have been arranged in the following order :—

- (1) Descriptive rolls of infantry.
- (2) „ „ „ „ 'amla.

Remarks.—The three battalions mentioned above were almost purely Panjābi battalions. Bāj Singh's raised in Sambat 1872 (1815 A.D.) was composed of the Jāt Sikhs, whereas the remaining two had, besides the Sikhs, a very large number of Hindūs and Muhammadans (of the Panjāb) in their ranks. They were raised in Sambat 1879 (1822 A.D.) and formed a part of the special brigade commanded by Generals Ventura and Allard.

APPENDIX I.

In the originals, the pay rolls of the battalion Dewa Singh cover 31 folios, but the facsimile copy of only first three have been made with a view to enable the reader to form an idea of what they are like.

The details of names and expenditure of the remaining 7 companies and the establishment, though given in the originals in a manner, similar to the one exhibited by those in the first company, have been omitted here and only the total number is given in each case (vide page 158).

In the facsimile, figures in the margin in each of the horizontal columns represent the total—the upper one crossed at the end by a thin line denotes the total number of men, and the lower one, without any such distinguishing mark represent the total monthly salaries of the men. The figures in the middle of each column represent the total amount paid for the period covered by the pay sheets. Of the two figures given under each name in the columns on pages 2, 3 and 4 in vernacular, the upper one denotes the rate of his monthly salary and the lower one the total payment made to the man.

On the left margin page 1 (vernacular) is a note to the effect that the battalion was given privilege leave on 2 Sanwan 1893 (14th August 1836) the officers' date of leave expiring on 15th Bhadon 1893 (25th September 1836), and that of the privates 1st Asuj 1893 (11th October 1836). There will also be found notes on the succeeding pages, both across the margin and below several names. The former show any variations in the strength of the company as compared to the rolls of the immediately preceding months caused by death, desertion or transfer from or to the battalion, while the latter relate to some particulars about the individual himself.
